Air Force extends SAPR services to AF civilians

*By Secretary of the Air Force
Public Affairs*

WASHINGTON (AFNS) – The Air Force released a policy memo recently allowing Air Force civilian employees who are victims of sexual assault to file restricted and unrestricted reports with their installation's sexual assault response coordinator.

The policy is effective immediately and allows SARCs and sexual assault prevention and response victim advocates to assist Air Force civilians who report sexual assaults by providing crisis intervention and advocacy services 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"Civilian employees make up a large part of our military family," said Rolando DeLeon, 19th Airlift Wing Sexual Assault Response Coordinator. "This change ensures we extend the same level of support to all of our Airmen in times of crisis."

AFE experts better Afghan Air Force

By Tech. Sgt. Joseph Swafford

455th Air Expeditionary Wing Public Affairs

KABUL, Afghanistan - Airmen assigned to the 455th Air Expeditionary Wing recently traveled to Hamid Karzai International Airport to assist Train, Advise, Assist Command-Air with training and validating the Afghan air force's aircrew flight equipment section.

The three-day trip gave the 455th AEW Airmen the opportunity to share their AFE knowledge with their Afghan counterparts and also assist TAAC-Air with keeping Coalition AFE equipment current.

Having AFE qualified technicians is critical as Afghanistan continues to strengthen its Air Force.

"We're building up the Afghan air force so they can stand on their own two feet," said Master Sgt. Michael Doane, TAAC-Air flight equipment adviser and operations team superintendent. "A critical part of that is making sure the pilots can leave and return safely to base and they do that with the equipment AFE provides for them in the aircraft."

Doane is a one man shop and having the extra help from the 455th truly makes an impact on the success of the TAAC-Air mission.

"With having the extra help here we were able to get a week's worth of work done in half a day," said Doane. "Without the last visit and this visit I wouldn't be able to survive my mission and would have failed without working seven days a week, 15 hours a day. It was awesome to have the help and be able to have a team here; the support has been immeasurable."

One of the Airmen who came down to assist Doane works with him back at their home station of Little Rock Air Force Base, Arkansas, and he knew he would bring a lot of C-130 knowledge to share with the AAF.

"Having his expertise here for the C-130 mission is awesome. A lot of the things I've learned at Little Rock, with it being my first C-130 base, were taught to me by Staff Sgt. Maurer," said Doane. "So who better to come down and teach these guys. Having worked together in the past I knew it would be a good example for the Afghans to see how the U.S. Air Force works. Knowing what he would say and do showed a unified front and that we have our stuff together."

The AAF C-130s were acquired from the U.S. and once resided at Little Rock, so seeing the same aircraft that they used to work on brought back memories for the two Little Rock Airmen.

"It was surreal to see the same aircraft that I had seen for years," said Staff Sgt. John Maurer, 774th Expeditionary Airlift Squadron AFE noncommissioned officer in charge. "I remembered all the times of opening the door and climbing the steps to do post-flight inspections with an American flag on the tail, now coming out here and seeing the same aircraft with an Afghan flag is really cool."

"It's full circle seeing some of the same aircraft that I've worked on at Little Rock," said Doane. "The latest aircraft we received I got a folder with all the inspection letters addressed to me. I got to show the Afghans that this came from my base and now I'm here to train them on it. I think it is appreciated to the lowest levels of the AFE shop here that I'm here to teach them on equipment I'm familiar with."

After the three day trip, the 455th AEW Airmen were amazed at how much knowledge the Afghan airmen retained from Doane and their eagerness to learn more.

"I was honestly taken back on how much the Afghans wanted to show their knowledge of AFE with us," said Master Sgt. Nicholas Voaklander, 555th Expeditionary Fighter Squadron AFE quality assurance noncommissioned officer in charge.

"Even with a language barrier they were able to point at things and show us what they would normally check and demonstrated what they have learned."

"It was pretty awesome to share the knowledge I have for my job with someone who truly appreciates it and is eager to learn," said Maurer. "They appreciated the fact that we took time out of our regular job to teach them."

Buyer beware: Don't fall victim to consumer fraud

By Senior Airman Jessica L. Puletapuai

19th Airlift Wing Legal Office

Although not commonly discussed, consumer fraud is prevalent and is affecting service members, dependents and military veterans.

Consumer fraud is considered any deceptive practice that causes financial loss to consumers as a result of seemingly legitimate business transactions. The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB), Service Members Affairs Office (OSA), specializes in assisting the military community and veterans with these financial challenges and sharing preventive measures.

OSA coordinates military consumer protection measures with federal and state agencies. According to officials, "we've received more than 35,000 complaints from servicemembers, veterans, and their family members. Their experiences tell us a lot about priorities in the market and where to focus."

The CFPB web page offers consumers a chance to get answers in regards to financial questions such as payday loans, student loans, credit reports and other money basics. You can also find information about the law and regulations governing consumer financial protection.

The website also allows users to submit complaints. The bureau accepts complaints about bank accounts, credit cards, credit reporting, mortgages, money transfers, student loans and vehicle loans. When a claim is submitted, the CFPB issues a ticket number and forwards the complaint to the company in question. Using the ticket number, they provide users with status updates on responses from the product or service companies. Complaint information is shared with state and federal law enforcement to be investigated, and the CFPB reports the information to Congress.

For users who don't wish to file a complaint, CFPB provides an option to tell their story, good or bad, for other readers to view. You can visit the CFPB website at <http://www.consumerfinance.gov/servicemembers/>, or you can call them toll free at 855-411-2372.

The CFPB is just one of many resources utilized in consumer fraud issues. Thousands of people are defrauded annually, including numerous military personnel. Ensuring preventive measurements are taken may assist in reducing this risk.

If you have questions about the CFPB or think you may be a victim of consumer fraud, stop by the legal office in Bldg. 1250 or call (501) 987-7886.

Safety giggles

Comedian makes safety a laughing matter

By Senior Airman Scott Poe

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The subject of safety is no joke, but Team Little Rock members laughed and learned about the serious subject from comedian Steve Verret Aug. 28.

Verret visited the Rock as part of the Base's continued focus on the critical days of summer. However, his safety spiel was not like most that military members experience. Instead of "death by Powerpoint", his performance encouraged audience participation and tackled topics ranging from vehicle safety to suicide prevention.

As a former traffic safety teacher, Verret learned the language of laughter enlivened the dull subject of safety. His funny stories of his Louisiana Cajun upbringing and youthful misadventures were a hit with his students.

"When I moved to California I was doing comedy at The Improv and someone told me that there was a job opening for someone who wanted to teach driving safety," said Verret. "So I went to teach traffic safety, but I didn't do it the traditional way, I taught in a comedic way."

He learned quickly that the techniques from his standup act translated well to the safety setting. He uses his gift of gab to inspire people to look at safety from a different perspective.

"I believe a person retains much more information when they are having fun and laughing," said Verret. "I figure if I can save one life by doing these shows, then it's totally worth it."

"I always think what a tragedy it would be if someone serving our country would die because of not wearing a seatbelt or they didn't have their headrest up or they didn't think before they had alcohol before they drove the car," he said. "So I am doing my little part I think to help people who serve our country."

Richard Myers, 19th Airlift Wing occupational safety manager, said participants enjoyed the show and he looks forward to inviting Verret back.

"Steve Verret offers a fresh way of delivering safety information through comic relief," said Myers. "His unique approach to communicating the safety message is one that rejuvenates the Airmen's perspective on safety here at Little Rock, and we look forward to seeing him again."

“Our civilian Airmen are valuable members of our team, and we’re going to support them,” said Secretary of the Air Force Deborah Lee James. “While this is a huge win for the Air Force and our civilian force, we will continue to work at all levels to prevent sexual assault.”

The Department of Defense recently signed an exception to policy, granting the Air Force the authority to extend SAPR services. Air Force civilian employees will now receive the same services as those already eligible to use SARC services, with the exception of legal and non-emergency medical services, which are restricted by law. Prior to this exception, only civilian employees at overseas locations and their dependents 18 years old or older were eligible to use SARC services, and they could only file unrestricted reports.

SARCs and SAPR victim advocates will assist in contacting the appropriate law enforcement agency for Air Force civilians who file unrestricted reports to ensure reports are properly investigated and prosecuted. They will also be able to help civilians identify and contact additional off-base support organizations as needed.

“Our SARCs and victim advocates provide invaluable support and assistance to our uniformed Airmen who have suffered from this horrible crime,” said Maj. Gen. Gina Grosso, the Air Force SAPR director. “We knew we could do more to help our civilian Airmen, so we sought an exception to policy to allow the Air Force to extend the same care and support to civilian victims as we do to our military Airmen and their families.”

Exercise tests base's procedures, resolve

By 19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Team Little Rock members tested the base's Antiterrorism response procedures Aug. 26, 2015.

The base exercised progression through FPCON levels, Shelter-In-Place Procedures, and Patient Decontamination at the 19th Medical Group.

Specifically, the teams responded to a domestic terrorist and chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear threats.

"As a key element of the Air Force Inspection System's (AFIS) continual evaluation process, a small team of AMC/IG professionals were on-site for a mid-point visit to observe the 19th AW Commander's Inspection Program (CCIP) in action and provide important mentorship to the Wing's IGI team," said Maj. Jason Baker, 19th AW Director of Inspections.

These exercises are vital to testing processes and capabilities to ensure the base can continue operations in a hazardous environment with minimal to no loss of personnel or resources.

"What they found was a completely integrated Team Little Rock Wing Inspection Team (WIT) effort and invaluable inter-command partnerships at all levels--both of which are crucial to our installation's defense and continued excellence," Baker said.

Chief's Group scholarships

U.S. Air Force photos by Senior Airman Scott Poe

Airman 1st Class Dustin Murphy (left), a 19th Logistics Readiness Squadron material management journeyman, and Airman 1st Class Riocornell Golo (above), a 19th Medical Operations Squadron medical technician, were recently awarded $300 scholarships to further their educational goals from the Little Rock AFB Chief's Group. "We want to ensure we are actually helping our Airmen with donations of substance" said, Chief Master Sgt. Lew Holston, the group's Scholarship Committee Chair. The Chiefs' Group holds fundraisers and regularly distributes funds to various organizations and causes on base, the local community and throughout the Air Force.

LRAFB HISTORY FAST FACT

34 DAYS TO GO UNTIL LRAFB TURNS 60!

At 5:32 p.m. on Sept. 4, 1957, Capt. Robert Dupras entered his landing pattern to conclude a two-hour test hop in B-47E 52-0220; however, as he attempted to lower the forward main landing gear on approach to Little Rock AFB, the gear did not lower. For the next 16 hours, Dupras and his crew circled over the base attempting to lower the landing gear 65 times with no success. After all attempts failed, the aircraft commander elected to attempt a landing with gear up. The fire department covered the runway with foamite before the crew landed. Once on the ground, the crew abandoned the aircraft without incident and the fire department, as a precautionary measure, used foamite on the engines. The amount of damage to the aircraft was considered negligible and the aircraft returned to service after cleaning the engines and replacing sheet metal. The manufacturer of the aircraft, Boeing Airplane Company, found during the incident investigation that the lock rod inside the lock release tube was broken at a point adjacent to the upper lock jaw of the gear; this was considered an isolated incident. The crew of the B-47E, assigned to the 384th Bombardment Wing, consisted of Dupras, pilot; 1st Lt. Joseph Fearn, co-pilot; and Capt. Edward Wieland, bombardier.
