The two members engaged and neutralized a threat June 15, protecting base personnel and government assets.

Defenders vigilant during threat, receive commander's gratitude and medals for quick response

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

U.S. Air Force Staff Sgt. Zachary Freese and Airman 1st Class Codee Smith, 19th Security Forces Squadron Defenders, received the Air Force Commendation Medal during a ceremony Sept. 14 at the Military Operations Urban Terrain (MOUT) Village on Little Rock Air Force Base.

What began as a normal day on June 15 quickly turned into a day that would prove training to be invaluable when dealing with life-threatening situations.

At approximately 9:15 a.m., after the peak of inbound morning traffic passed, the Defenders closed the entry control point on Vandenberg Drive to a single lane. In an instant, a calm situation turned chaotic when a person drove his SUV upwards of 80 miles an hour into the gate. Before ramming the gate, he hit a light post in front of the base visitor center. At that moment, the Defenders reacted as if the person was seriously injured and immediately went to render first aid.

That was until the person got out of the vehicle brandishing a rifle.

The Defenders then went from first responders rendering aid to controlling a hostile situation. After a series of verbal commands, the suspect aimed the weapon at one of the Defenders with the intent to fire. And the Defenders reacted, containing the situation and ultimately stopping the suspect with deadly force.

Ten seconds. That's how long the Defenders had to react to the situation and regain control.

"One thing that stays with me is how the events went from a vehicle accident to a man with a weapon," said Freese, a native of Jennings, Louisiana. "It happened so quickly, but we were ready."

In those few split seconds between the vehicle crashing into a light post in front of the Visitors' Control Center and the suspect exiting the disabled vehicle brandishing a weapon, the Defenders stepped up and took control of the situation without hesitation.

"When the wolf came knocking at the door ... every one of you ran to the sound of gunfire. It's impressive that when civilians took cover, you ran toward danger," said Col. Charles Brown Jr., 19th Airlift Wing and installation commander, before the medal presentation. "You couldn't get there fast enough.

Flags Fly to Honor Fallen

U.S. Air Force illustration by Senior Airman Kaylee Clark

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

American flags fly in the base Heritage Park until Monday as a reminder of the ultimate sacrifice of 144 Arkansans.

The Arkansas Fallen Heroes Memorial was founded in October 2005 by Gold Star dad Rob Hopper of Wynne, Arkansas. Rob's youngest son, Marine Lance Cpl. Brian Chase Hopper, was killed Jan. 26, 2005, in Iraq.

Rob chose to remember his son and fallen Arkansans by creating a traveling flag field. The field is made up of flags and placards with pictures and biographies of each of the fallen.

Airmen and families volunteered Sept. 14 setting up 144 flags for the display honoring fallen Arkansans.

"We are not here to honor what happened to these Fallen Heroes, but to honor who they were, what they were doing, and to thank them by forever remembering them for paying the ultimate sacrifice for our freedoms and rights that we have today," said Hopper.

Vigilant

When you come up to the base, there's a sign that says 'By order of the installation commander, no weapons allowed on base.' You took your charge seriously, and your actions quite literally saved lives."

For Smith, this instinct is something that was instilled in him from an early age.

"We brought him up in Alaska, and we taught him early on about guns and how to protect his family," said Tammy Smith, mother of Airman Smith, natives of North Pole, Alaska. "I'm so glad that when this happened ... he followed his training and didn't hesitate."

For the 19th SFS Defenders, their actions can best be attributed to not only instinct, but also to the regular training that is conducted to keep their skills sharp and prepare them on how to address given scenarios.

"Muscle memory played a large part in how we responded that day," Freese said. "We train to certain scenarios, and this was a perfect example of something we trained for and unfortunately had to deal with real-world. The thing about that day was everyone reacted - it wasn't just one person leading and others following along. We reacted as a unit. That's what training does."

One Defender ran so quickly to the defense of his fellow Airmen that he had to unleash his military working dog because he was outrunning the service dog. All of these immediate actions were to ensure that the base perimeter was not breached and the safety of those on base and in the community directly outside the fence line remained safe.

"This proves that no matter how far you are from the flightline on Little Rock AFB, you are a Combat Airlifter," Brown said. "The base remains safe because of their vigilance. My appreciation will never be grander for you."

The 19th SFS worked closely with the Air Force Office of Special Investigations, Jacksonville Police Department and the FBI to bring a final resolution to the incident.

C-130 training spans the globe

LRAFB international training programs in high demand

By Cheri Dragos-Pritchard

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

During fiscal year 2014 nearly 200 international students from 19 different countries received C-130 flying and maintenance training here through the 714th and 373rd Training Squadrons respectively.

Recently, George Gagnon, a senior executive service member and the director of International Training and Education for Air Education and Training Command, visited the 314th and 189th Airlift Wings to discuss the international training program and visit the C-130 Center of Excellence training facility.

“Our aircraft are not considered the primary weapon we have in our arsenal,” Gagnon said about why other countries want to come to the U.S. for training. “Our primary weapon system is our U.S. Air Force Airmen. We train professionals and other countries want their airmen to be like our Airmen. They want trained professionals.”

Col. Jeffrey Gast, 314th Airlift Wing vice commander, added, “The 314th Airlift Wing and its partners, the 189th and 19th Airlift Wings, provide the world’s premier training to air forces around the globe that operate C-130s.”

During the visit, Gagnon talked about what his office and personnel can do to help the international training program. He discussed the mission and structure of his office as well as Air Force Security Assistance Training.

“We develop, deliver and manage education and training solutions,” stated Gagnon. “We are the executive agent for all Air Force-sponsored international training.”

The director went on to say air forces all over the world ask for training here, and he does his best not to turn away a customer.

“We just have to find the right program and location, and Little Rock Air Force Base is the best solution in the international community for C-130J combat airlift training.”

Gagnon and his team toured the training

New shuttle service takes Airmen out, about

By Arlo Taylor

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

A new bus shuttle service launched this month providing those living in the dorms without cars a chance to break the surly bonds of the base and have some fun downtown.

The next shuttle trip set for Sept. 26 picks riders up at the Walters Community Support Center at 5:30 and 6 p.m. headed for stops at McCain Mall in North Little Rock and the River Market in Little Rock. The service picks up patrons from McCain Mall at 9:30 p.m. and the River Market at 10:30 p.m.

Riders must register with the 19th Force Support Squadron's Information Tickets and Tours office no later than the day before the trip. The cost is $5 per person for the round-trip service.

"We decided to start the shuttle service to offer our airmen a more affordable option (for dorm residents) to get off base and enjoy what North Little Rock and Little Rock have to offer," said Andrea Hammock, the 19th FSS Information, Tickets and Tours manager. "Advantages to this service are saving money and getting out into the local community, as well as providing an alternative to returning to base safely after a night out."

Though the service is aimed at Airmen living in base dorms, it is open to all military ID card holders who would like a lift downtown for the nominal fee.

"[We] continuously look for ways to improve the quality of life for our military and their families," said Monica Young, 19th FSS marketing director. "It is a very economical way to visit McCain Mall or downtown Little Rock."

Customer feedback, as well as use of the program will be crucial to the service expanding to other areas of the Little Rock Metro area.

"Now that word has started to spread we have received many inquiries and positive feedback on the program," Hammock said. "[Expanding our route] is definitely a possibility if the locations are popular requests and the service is utilized.

"Unfortunately, if there is no participation for this service, we could potentially not offer it anymore," she said.

The shuttle service can also be reserved for special occasion treks. A person who books a trips with 20 or more passengers will get their trip fee comped. Trip fees are calculated by the actual cost of the trip divided by the number of guests who attend.

For more information about the shuttle service or other adventures ITT offers, call 987-5105 or visit www.rockinattherock.com.

LRAFB HISTORY FAST FACT

20 DAYS TO GO UNTIL LRAFB TURNS 60!

On Sept. 18, 1980, an Airman conducting maintenance on the Titan II Southside (374-7) missile silo near Damascus (Faulkner County), dropped a wrench socket. The wrench fell approximately 80 feet before hitting and piercing the skin on the missile's first-stage fuel tank, causing a leak. Air Force personnel staffing the site and 1,400 civilian residents evacuated the area before Little Rock Air Force Base personnel determined none of the nuclear material had escaped from the missile. Early the next morning, Senior Airman David L. Livingston (inset), and Sgt. Jeff K. Kennedy entered the launch complex to get readings of airborne-fuel concentrations, which they found to be at their maximum levels. After returning to the surface, the two Airmen awaited further instructions, but the missile exploded in the silo, flinging the warhead 700 feet from the silo. The warhead's safety features operated correctly, preventing loss of radioactive material, but 21 were injured in the explosion or during rescue efforts. Livingston, assigned to the 308th Missile Maintenance Squadron, was the only fatality from the incident.
