UNIT EFFECTIVENESS INSPECTION

Be proud, ready to show IG our mission

By Maj. Jason Baker

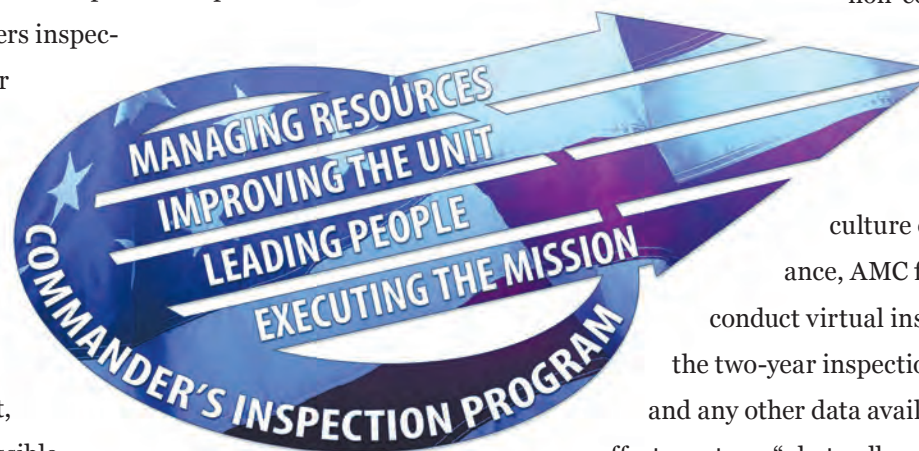

19th Airlift Wing Inspector General Office

The Air Mobility Command's Inspector General is scheduled to conduct a Unit Effectiveness Inspection-Capstone, or UEI-C, event Dec. 6 through Dec. 14, throughout the 19th Airlift Wing.

A team of approximately 95 personnel will be on base to evaluate how effectively our wing executes our mission. This is the wing's second UEI-C and thus begins the second round of inspections across AMC with added focus on the wing commander's inspection program.

This capstone inspection combines multiple inspections into one, reducing time spent preparing for inspections as traditionally experienced during the days of operational readiness inspections, unit compliance inspections and other higher headquarters inspections. During a two-year cycle, commanders are responsible for inspecting their own programs and noting discrepancies in the Management Internal Control Toolset, or MICT, as often as possible.

This UEI-C marks the end of the command's current UEI inspection cycle and will validate the 19th AW commander's inspection program. At the inspection's conclusion, the wing will be rated on four major graded areas: Managing resources, leading people, improving the unit and executing the mission.

Greg Call

19th AW Inspector General for Inspections

“In the past, we wasted a lot of effort taking our eyes off of mission readiness to prepare to pass the inspection instead of showing the inspectors how we do our mission,” said Greg Call, 19th AW Inspector General for Inspections. “We have been continually evaluating ourselves over the last two years, and this inspection is just the culmination of all that hard work. Airmen should continue to look for areas of non-compliance and report it up the chain of command and through MICT.”

To promote a culture of continual compliance, AMC functional managers conduct virtual inspections throughout the two-year inspection cycle using MICT and any other data available to them. This effort creates a “photo album” of performance metrics that allows the AMC/IG team to focus their inspection efforts on high-interest items and areas needing further clarification.

“A wing no longer halts the mission to conduct an inspection, but every Airman should stand proud and ready to show AMC/IG how they get the job done,” Call said.

AMC/IG spouses session

The Air Mobility Command Inspector General's office hosts Airmen to IG Sessions during the 19th Airlift Wing's Capstone Unit Effectiveness Inspection) from Dec. 6-Dec. 14. They will meet with Airmen, civilians and spouses in closed group sessions to discuss a number of topics.

The ATIS-G is a small group of people led through a structured discussion by a skilled facilitator. The ATIS-G facilitator encourages disclosure in an open and safe format, free from fear of reprisal. The facilitator's goal in a group setting is to generate opinions, beliefs and perceptions from respondents. The information gathered during these sessions will help us identify where the 19th AW, AMC and the Air Force could improve, and also identify where things are going right.

Those who would like to be included in the spouses session must send their first and last name as well as “19 AW Spouses Session” in the subject line to ig.igi@us.af.mil.”

HISTORY FACT

COURTESY PHOTO

Why is there a helicopter in Heritage Park? From 1963 to 1987 Little Rock Air Force Base was home to helicopter operations. This included the H-19 Chickasaw, UH-1F Huey and HH-1H Iroquois. From December 1973 to August 1987, the HH-1H Iroquois helicopters were assigned to Detachment 4, 37th Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Squadron. The unit's mission primarily focused on supporting the 308th Strategic Missile Wing by delivering equipment and personnel to the 18 Titan II missile silos located around central Arkansas. The helicopters were instrumental in responding quickly to disasters at the missile silos, including the 1980 emergency in which the unit was credited with saving three lives that day. The helicopters also assisted in search and rescue missions for both military and civilian emergencies. Following the inactivation of the 308 SMW, the Air Force reassigned the helicopters and crews to other bases. The Iroquois located in Heritage Park was assigned to Little Rock AFB from 1979 until 1987. In 1995, the helicopter was dropped from Air Force inventory and has been on display since 2004.

President proclaims Military Family Month

By President Barack Obama

President of the United States

Since our country's founding, brave members of our military have stood strong as one American team, ready to defend our homeland and safeguard the values for which we stand. They represent the best our Nation has to offer, and serving alongside them are proud and loving family members — heroes on the home front. Each day, they make sacrifices for their loved ones and their country. They have answered their call of duty, and as a Nation, we must answer ours and serve them as well as they have served us. During Military Family Month, we pay tribute to and thank our military families for their service to our country, and we recognize the extraordinary ways in which they give of themselves for us all.

Our troops keep our Nation safe from threats here at home and around the world, and our journey forward is not sustained by those in uniform alone. The United States is stronger and safer thanks to the millions of military family members who, in sacrificing cherished moments with their loved ones, selflessly afford us precious time with ours. Demonstrating the highest form of patriotism and persevering in the most demanding of circumstances, some endure hard separations throughout multiple deployments. Spouses press pause on their careers or strive to balance work and family while their loved ones are away. The two million children of service members work hard to keep up their studies and make new friends, despite transferring school systems an average of 6 to 9 times. And following the homecoming ceremonies and celebrations, family and friends stand beside our veterans, encouraging and uplifting them as they face the challenges of transitioning back into civilian life.

My Administration is committed to translating our Nation's gratitude into sustainable, meaningful support. This year, we continued the work of providing our military families with tools and resources such as relocation assistance, child care, and counseling services that help families while their loved ones are serving. Additionally, through the Joining Forces initiative, First Lady Michelle Obama and Dr. Jill Biden have made tremendous strides in connecting military spouses with employment opportunities. Since Joining Forces was launched in 2011, over 850,000 veterans and military spouses have secured gainful employment thanks to the initiative. All 50 States have now responded to the First Lady and Dr. Biden's call to action to take steps to streamline ways for service members and veterans to obtain civilian credentials and licensure in their States. These collaborative efforts have dramatically lowered veteran unemployment and have helped inspire military families to continue pursuing their dreams and reaching for their highest aspirations.

America endures because of the men, women, and families who serve and sacrifice to defend our Nation and protect the ideals we hold dear. This month, and in the months to come, let us show our enduring gratitude to military families and their loved ones in uniform for contributing to our Nation's legacy as a beacon of hope and liberty. Their courage serves as a model of character and distinction, and their devotion to our country must be met with the recognition it deserves.

Now, therefore, I, Barack Obama, President of the United States of America, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the laws of the United States, do hereby proclaim November 2015 as Military Family Month. I encourage all Americans to honor military families through private actions and public service for the tremendous contributions they make in support of our service members and our Nation.

“ This month, and in the months to come, let us show our enduring gratitude to military families and their loved ones in uniform for contributing to our Nation's legacy as a beacon of hope and liberty.

MILITARY FAMILY MONTH

A&FRC celebrates military families

By Arlo Taylor

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

November is Military Family Month and the Airman & Family Readiness Center marks the month with their Something for Everyone Extravaganza that kicks off at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at the WarFit Track.

The event brings the entire military family together with a day of games, contests, displays, demonstrations, information, food, drawings, prizes and fun for the entire military community.

“Military Family Month is an annual event that provides us with an opportunity to celebrate both the diversity of the military family as well as the unique contributions they make every day in support of their Airmen and this community,” said Sharon Thompson, A&FRC director. “The welfare of every military family is important to the success not only of that airman but the mission as well.”

Thompson said the extravaganza is designed to provide activities for all military families.

“This event has something for everyone. Regardless of whether you’re a single airman living in the dorm, a young couple with no children, a spouse whose sponsor has deployed or a retiree, this event brings the entire military family together,” she said. This is just a great chance to recognize how special the military lifestyle is and what it means to be a member of this community. It’s time to relax, play, have fun and enjoy our community and all it has to offer.”

This event also showcases the broad range of helping organizations and activities available to military families.

“The welfare of every military family is important to the success not only of their Airman, but the mission as well,” said Kori Ramirez, A&FRC counselor. “In addition to the games and activities, this Military Family Month event provides an opportunity for families to meet agency representatives that are here to provide assistance every day and learn about the services and resources they provide.”

Most activities are ongoing throughout the day. Activities with set times are the Dating Game for Couples at 10:15, 10:45 and 11:15 a.m.; the Littlest Warrior pageant at 10:15 a.m. and We’ve Got Talent contest at 10:45 a.m.

From the 19th Airlift Wing's Office of the Staff Judge Advocate: The Uniform Code of Military Justice authorizes commanders to exercise personal discretion in evaluating each case. Commanders consider the nature of the offense, the record of the service member, the need for good order and discipline, the effect of punishment on the service member, and the service member's record. Every case is unique and is evaluated independently. The Manual for Courts-Martial reminds us that military law promotes justice, assists in the maintenance of good order and discipline in the armed forces, promotes the efficiency and effectiveness of the military establishment, and strengthens the national security of the United States.

Norwegian Foot March

By Senior Airman Stephanie Serrano

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Twenty-eight Central Arkansas service members donned heavily laden rucksacks and assembled to attempt the grueling Norwegian Foot March on Oct. 30 at Camp Robinson in North Little Rock.

The Norwegian Foot March is an 18.6-mile march where competitors strive to complete the course within an allotted amount of time to earn the Norwegian Foot March badge.

Competitors reported to Station One to check-in and have their rucksacks inspected. Next, their rucksacks were weighed and the weight recorded.

The marchers lugged a minimum of 25 pounds in their rucksacks throughout the march, carrying canned goods for donation to a local food bank.

The march began at approximately 6:30 a.m. with participants heading down North Dakota Ave. The route traversed the Robinson Maneuver Training Center using turn around points and requiring a total of 2 full laps to complete the 18.6 mile goal.

U.S. Army Command Sgt. Major Gregory Slater finished first, besting the strenuous trek in 3 hours and 26 minutes.

The second place finisher was U.S. Army Capt. Trey Marable with a time of 3:36 followed closely by U.S. Air Force Lt. Col. Paul Jara at 3:37.

First time competitors seem to feel an even deeper sense of achievement for finishing the march.

“It’s a great sense of accomplishment,” Jara said. “I did this first for jointness with the Army; and second, to prove to myself that I could do it. I’m glad to be finished.”

Of the 28 participants who started the march, only 22 completed it in their allotted times, five others did not finish. U.S. Air Force Airman 1st Class Jenny Ragoobir finished with the last qualifying time of 4:53.

Marchers and volunteers contributed four large boxes of canned goods from their rucksack which was and donated to the Arkansas Food Bank. Proceeds from the march also tallied $409, which was donated to Arkansas Children’s Hospital.

U.S. AIR FORCE PHOTOS BY SENIOR AIRMAN KAYLEE CLARK

The 34th Combat Training Squadron integrates Combat Airlift's unique capabilities into the Army's Joint Readiness Training Center relevant, rigorous training regimen at Fort Polk, La. GREEN FLAG Little Rock builds real-world experience and relationships through worst-case scenario-driven events of the JRTC learning environment. The squadron's 35-person team orchestrates a realistic, tactical, joint combat training environment for Mobility Airmen. "Port Dawgs" inspect and move cargo and equipment from C-130s and C-17s meeting the relentless pace of GREEN FLAG Little Rock.

Child support obligation for service members

If a service member refuses to pay child support as ordered by a divorce decree or other legal document, there is unfortunately not really a quick way to make that member pay up.

However, there may be an inexpensive way for custodial parents to obtain an involuntary allotment from the service member's pay. Each military branch has different regulations that establish policies for support enforcement.

When the military member refuses to pay support obligations after being urged to do so, the commander does not have the power to simply take money from the member and give it to the parent who is due to receive payment. The Air Force also cannot force a certain percentage to be paid to a spouse or children when a family is separated awaiting divorce, although other services branches allow for this. The Air Force can, though, take administrative or disciplinary action against the member for failing to pay child support, and there are state enforcement procedures in place to enforce child support orders against military members and civilians.

There are three methods for legal enforcement of child support or child support with maintenance obligations against a military member, and all three require a court-ordered child support decree. The methods are:

Direct Payment: if you already have a finalized decree of divorce, dissolution, annulment or legal separation, you can take advantage of this option, which is available through the Uniformed Services Former Spouses' Protection Act. The decree you have must, however, contain an order for support. The custodial parent sends the appropriate finance center a copy of this decree with a request for direct payment and the finance center will make payment directly to the custodial parent.

Wage Assignment: this option is better known as a garnishment and can be used when the member is at least one month behind in payments. It is an "involuntary allotment," created by state law to enforce support obligations. This method will most likely require the use of an attorney to go to court and obtain an order. The procedure for obtaining a wage assignment will be the same as the procedure for involuntary allotment. Visit <http://www.dfas.mil/garnishment/childsupportalimony/startpayment.html> for more information.

Involuntary Allotment: this last option can be used if the service member is at least two months behind in payments. Unlike the others, this method does not require a court order and may be used without an attorney. The procedure is initiated by notice from an authorized person of the designated official of the applicable military service. In Pulaski County, the authorized person is the Clerk of the Child Support Enforcement Unit. The designated official is the appropriate military finance center; most likely the Defense Finance and Accounting Service for Air Force members. The county clerk then certifies that the member is at least two months delinquent in support payments and a notice is sent to DFAS.

After service of the notice from the authorized official, no response is required; however, it is routine practice for the services to respond within 45 days. The member is given 30 days in which to respond to involuntary allotment, at which time the member may go to court and have the allotment halted if he or she provides supporting documentation to show lack of being delinquent or an underlying support order has been amended. If the designated official, DFAS, finds the documentation to be substantial proof of error, the official may return the notice to the authorized person without acting on it. Under this involuntary allotment option, a member's basic pay, basic allowance for housing and basic allowance for subsistence are all subject to seizure to pay delinquent child support obligations, up to 60 percent after taxes.

If you have a child support order, you can register it with the Arkansas Office of Child Support Enforcement which will prosecute cases of non-support, no matter where the non-supporting parent is living. For more information or assistance with child support issues, visit the base legal office in Bldg. 1250 during legal assistance walk-in hours of 2-3 p.m. Mondays, 9-10 a.m. Wednesdays and 9-11 a.m. Fridays.

COMMUNITY HAPPENINGS

SATURDAY

The Asian Festival in Little Rock features egg-roll eating contests, hula hoop contests for kids, a silent auction, cultural displays and cultural entertainment. In the last three years, the festival has opened its doors to other ethnicities as well. This year, it will include Mexican and Mediterranean foods and fruit carvings and arrangements of Chef Tino Guevara. Admission is $5, and free for children under 12 years old, military, police, fireman and senior citizens. The event will be from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. at the Mosaic Church, 6420 Colonel Glen Road in Little Rock.

Firing range off limits

The 19th Security Forces Squadron Combat Arms firing range complex and surrounding area are off limits to all unauthorized personnel. Those requiring access to the range area must contact the range office in Bldg. 1389 for permission. For more information, call the Combat Arms section at 987-1350 or 987-1351.

Booster Club Opportunity

Community groups can raise funds for their worthy causes while spreading some holiday cheer as the LRAFB Exchange is actively soliciting partners for the Army & Air Force Exchange Service's annual community gift wrap program. "To make the holidays a little easier, we partner with local groups to ensure gifts purchased at the Exchange are wrapped up before they even leave the store," said general manager Al Fuentes. "Beyond offering a one-stop solution for busy military shoppers, this effort also helps raise money for local military support initiatives."

During peak holiday seasons, the LRAFB Exchange sets up tables and provides supplies that community volunteer groups can use to wrap gifts in exchange for donations. Interested organizations can contact the Base Exchange at 501-988-1180 for information on scheduling a time to participate.

"Your Holiday Bill is on us"

The Army & Air Force Exchange Service is making holiday wishes come true for military shoppers by picking up the tab on their Military Star card up to $8,200 with the "Your Holiday Bill Is On Us" sweepstakes.

From Nov. 1 through Dec. 31, shoppers will be automatically entered in the worldwide sweepstakes each time they use their Military Star card to pay for purchases at the Little Rock AFB Exchange or on shopmyexchange.com. Each transaction counts as one entry.

Three grand-prize winners will receive their Military Star card bill paid in full up to $8,200 with a minimum prize of $2,500. Ten second-prize winners will be awarded a $1,000 credit on their Military Star card statement, while 25 third-place winners will earn a $500 credit. Winners with a balance less than their prize amount will receive a credit on their account.

"With this sweepstakes, the Exchange is making dreams come true and changing lives," said General Manager, Al Fuentes. "Just one swipe of a Military Star card is all it takes to enter."

Winners of the "Your Holiday Bill Is On Us" sweepstakes will be announced on or about Jan. 30.
