NEW PERCEPTION

Worldview changed with enlistment

By Chief Master Sgt. Victoria V. Gamble

Headquarters Air Mobility Command Chief

SCOTT AIR FORCE BASE, Ill. – Prior to entering U.S. Air Force basic training in July 1985, my view of the world consisted of my hometown family, friends and the local environment. Since I came from a rural community, my view of the world was very small. This is understandable since I was surrounded by people who had the same beliefs and were brought up in a similar fashion.

All this changed in basic training. Since I was raised in the South, I was perplexed that other people did things like “bake” chicken when we all knew chicken tasted the absolute best when it was “fried.” For the first time ever, I was surrounded by other people with different backgrounds and beliefs. Spending quality time with these people began to slowly change my view of the world.

I can remember being in Germany in the late 1980’s and being quite shocked that the world map did not have the United States of America right smack in the middle of it.

The map I saw had Germany in the middle of it. I thought to myself, surely the folks at Rand McNally needed a good talking to. I would later discover that each subsequent country I visited would have their country in the middle of the map.

As I continued my service I would travel more broadly, meet many more people and be exposed to different cultures than I ever thought imaginable. These people were kind, intelligent, had families, hopes and dreams just like I did.

In a 2014 Pew Research study on Social Media and the ‘Spiral of Silence’, “research has shown that when people decide whether to speak out about an issue, they rely on reference groups, friendships and community ties--to weigh their opinion relative to their peers.” When we spend time with people that think and do things differently, we expand our critical thinking skills, increase our acceptance of others and make far better decisions.

As I’ve gotten closer to retirement, people have asked, “How can I honor your service, Chief?” The answer to this is easy and best of all, free. You can honor my service by surrounding yourself with people that think differently than you do. Seek out other Airmen with dissimilar thoughts, and you may surprise yourself with great ideas you never knew you had.

Over the years, the Air Force has provided me with many opportunities; from higher-level education and leadership opportunities to world travel. However, the best one afforded to me was the chance to meet people from all walks of life and learn from them. Jim Rohn once said, “You are the average of the five people you spend the most time with.”

After spending 30 years with Airmen, my average just got higher! I have much gratitude and respect for you all.

HEALTH TIPS

Keeping fit during the holidays

As the hustle and bustle of the holiday season approaches, Jeffery Vaughn, 19th Aerospace Medicine Squadron health promotions director, offers the following fitness tips to help members stay in shape despite limited time to hit the gym.

1. Stay in shape for the PT test with interval training. If you’re busy and pushed for time, try this: run hard for 30 seconds, recover run for 1 minute and repeat for 12-13 minutes.

2. Train smarter, not harder. If you don’t have time to hit the weight room, establish a mini-circuit training regimen. Pick five to six exercises – like push-ups, squats, mountain climbers, burpees, sit-ups, pull-ups, etc.; complete 10 repetitions of each movement as fast as possible and with good form; and repeat for 10 minutes, completing as many reps as possible.

HOW DOES THE INDIVIDUAL PORTRAY THAT CORE VALUE?

“Due to the mission of the 34th CTS and the hours of the mission, Pratt shows a big dedication to the service of being gone the hours he is,” said U.S. Air Force Master Sgt. Francesco Ventura, 34th CTS superintendent.

WHY IS SERVING IN THE AIR FORCE IMPORTANT TO YOU?

Serving in the Air Force is important to me because it's being able to do something special. Serving one's country is the highest calling one can do. Everything we do, how proud my family and wife are in me for everything I do gives me a sense of pride. I want them to be proud of what I do.

WHAT ACCOMPLISHMENT DURING YOUR AIR FORCE CAREER ARE YOU MOST PROUD OF?

I am most proud of the three deployments I was able to go on and my first four years. I'm glad I was able to support my country overseas because what we are doing over there matters.

HISTORY FACT

COURTESY PHOTO

On Dec. 5, 1942, the 62nd Troop Carrier Squadron activated at Sedalia Army Air Base, Mo. Aircrews, equipped with a full complement of new C-47 Skytrains, soon deployed for World War II. The 62nd TCS's first station was French Morocco to support combat operations in the North African Campaign. Crews flew transport and resupply operations as well as casualty evacuation of wounded personnel deployed to the Mediterranean theater of operations. While participating in combat operations, 62nd TCS crews also participated in the famous D-Day aerial assault by delivering paratroopers into Normandy on June 6, 1944. Since World War II, the 62nd Airlift Squadron has proudly borne the nickname of the "Yacht Club." Each unit had a codename in an attempt to create operational security. The codenames were used so that taskings could be passed over unsecured telephone lines.

LRAFB Fire Dept. provides trustworthy services

By Senior Airman Scott Poe

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The Little Rock Air Force Base Fire Department is now one of three fire departments accredited in Arkansas and the 20th in the Air Force.

The accreditation process is no easy task. It takes years and the participation of every individual on the department.

Don Smart, Little Rock Air Force Base Fire Department Fire Chief was apprehensive at first. After digging into the process he realized the benefits and the knowledge they would gain as a department.

“I was interested in improvement and growth; I asked myself how I can make this department better,” said Smart. “I want to make the department a valuable asset to the community that we serve, and accreditation will instill more confidence in our customers.”

Accreditation is a multifaceted and complex process. It consists of a comprehensive self-assessment and evaluation from a peer assessment team. The team will then submit a final report to the Commission on Fire Accreditation International. The commission then decides whether to grant, deny or defer accreditation.

“It took us about two years to prepare for the process and get to the point where we were ready to meet the commission,” said Smart.

Although the process was lengthy and time consuming the firemen kept their cool and easily maintained

Operation Supplement Safety

By Senior Airman Harry Brexel

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Every day, dietary supplement use becomes more popular in the United States. Service members are no exception to the trend. A recent Department of Defense initiative aims to educate service members, retirees, their family members, leaders, healthcare providers and DoD civilians about dietary supplements and how to choose supplements wisely.

Operation Supplement Safety is a joint initiative between the Human Performance Resource Center and the DoD. The campaign raises awareness and offers resources for those who take or are interested in taking supplements.

The most common reasons for taking supplements are to improve performance, for bodybuilding and to gain or lose weight. Though people may take supplements to improve their health, using them can actually have an adverse effect.

Potentially harmful examples that are in some supplements include caffeine, thermogenic fat burners, human growth hormone (HGH), dimethylbutylamine (DMAA), phentermine, capsaicin, nitric oxide boosters and testosterone boosters.

People may be putting themselves at risk by using dietary supplements. Some dietary supplements, including

OPERATION SUPPLEMENT SAFETY

- Dietary supplements are not substitutes for a healthy, balanced diet.
- FDA does not approve supplements for safety or effectiveness.
- Labels can be misleading – supplements may contain ingredients not listed on the supplement facts panel.
- Only supplements with third-party certification or verification seals on the label have been validated for quality.

ones sold on military installations, may contain problematic ingredients.

The Food and Drug Administration received 6,307 dietary supplement adverse event reports from 2008-2011, including 92 deaths. One-third of U.S. Airmen reported using “legal body-building supplements” in the past year, including 15-percent using them daily.

Jill Hinsley, the 19th Aerospace Medicine Squadron registered dietician, encourages eating real food first, before experimenting with supplements.

“There are benefits from real food that have yet to be discovered and created as supplements.” Hinsley said. “Real food is the most efficient fuel for the body. Not all supplements are bad but doing research on ingredients is important.”

For advice on better eating habits, call Hinsley at 501-987-7288. To find out what supplements are safe or unsafe, visit the Human Performance Resource Center’s website at www.hprc-online.org.

“Accreditation allows us to give validity and credibility to those things we are saying we do well, while also highlighting areas we need to improve,” said James Farrell, Little Rock AFB Fire Dept. training manager. “In the end, becoming accredited is all about improving what we do.”

The Little Rock AFB’s Fire Dept. has been granted accreditation but it does not mean they are done with the process.

“Accreditation is a change in the processes you do, it is a mindset change, it’s how you manage the department and the processes and programs we put to place have to be able to continue from now on,” said Smart. “In 5 years we will have to meet the commission again and they are going to want to see how we’ve changed and improved and to see that we are dedicated to improvement and growth within the department and bettering our services to our community.”

The Little Rock AFB’s Fire Dept. also has agreements with local cities including, Jacksonville, North Little Rock, and Little Rock, to provide mutual aid assistance and receive it as well.

“Having accreditation will help them have confidence in what we do and how we do our jobs,” Smart said. “I believe that will improve those relationships with our local communities.”

Know rules for political participation

As campaigns for the 2016 presidential election begin, remember service members are subject to certain restrictions when it comes to partisan political activities.

Partisan political activity is any activity associated with a certain political party, and even includes involvement with particular issues that are closely tied to a certain political party.

There are plenty of ways you can still get involved—and you should; however, keep some of the following guidelines in mind:

Do:

- Vote! Encourage others to vote!
- Sign petitions for legislation or to get a candidate’s name on the ballot (if signing as a private citizen).
- Express a personal opinion.
- Make monetary donations to political organizations, committees, or candidates.
- Attend political meetings and rallies—but NOT in uniform and NOT on duty.
- Join political clubs and attend meetings—but, again, NOT in uniform and NOT on duty.
- Write letters to the editor expressing personal political views so long as those view do not attempt to promote a partisan political cause (be careful on this one).
- Display a political bumper sticker on your POV.

NOTE: Avoid large political signs, banners, or posters. Also avoid having numerous political bumper stickers.

■ Wear political buttons—NOT in uniform and NOT on duty.

Don’t:

- Use official authority to affect an election or solicit votes for a particular candidate/issue.
- Run for or hold civil office.
- Participate in partisan political management or campaigns. This includes making speeches.
- Engage in public or organized recruitment of others to become partisan candidates.
- Sell tickets for, or actively promote, political dinners or other fundraising events.
- Serve in any official capacity to be listed as a sponsor of a partisan political club.
- Participate in radio, TV, or other programming group discussion advocating for a partisan political activity.
- Solicit funds for political causes on base.
- March or ride in partisan political parades.

These are not intended to be all-inclusive lists. Some activities, although not expressly prohibited, may be contrary to the spirit of the regulation. For more information about whether a particular political activity is impermissible, call the legal office at 987-7886.

Exchange keeping focus on family

With a quarter of its work force comprised of military family members, the Army & Air Force Exchange Service is a true example of family serving family. As such, the focus on Thanksgiving will be on family.

“As a part of the military community, the Exchange understands that time with family, for both customers and associates, is a priority,” said General Manager, Al Fuentes. “Opening at 4 a.m. on Black Friday will allow shoppers to give thanks with loved ones and still partake in the savings.”

Service members who are on the installation on Thanksgiving Day will still have access to convenience items as the Class Six Express will be open.

INFORMATION ABOUT THE LEGAL PROCESS FOR RELATIVE ADOPTION IN ARKANSAS WILL BE PRESENTED.

AN ATTORNEY FROM ARKANSAS LEGAL SERVICES IS THE GUEST SPEAKER.

BROUGHT TO YOU BY THE AIRMAN & FAMILY READINESS CENTER

Relative adoption workshop Dec. 16

By Senior Airman Stephanie Serrano

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Throughout the year, the Airman and Family Readiness Center does as much as they can to support Airmen and their families at Little Rock Air Force Base, Ark.

The A&FRC sponsors a new workshop called Relative Adoption from 1 until 2:30 p.m. on Dec. 16 at the Walters Community Support Center.

This class is geared toward helping grandparents, stepparent's, aunts and uncles, siblings or other family members wanting to pursue adopting a relative child in the state of Arkansas.

"Relative adoptions provide greater continuity for the children because they have ready access to their genetic, medical and family history. In addition, they have typically been already living with the relative and this just provides more stability to what is typically a chaotic situation," said Stacy Fletcher, Center for Arkansas Legal Services attorney.

"With stepparent adoptions, the stepparent has usually provided the primary care and support of the child (in some cases) and the non-custodial parent has not had much to do with the child," Fletcher said. "Being adopted really allows the child a feeling of safety and belonging with the person who has taken over that role."

Since the relative adoption process is different from normal adoption due to specific state requirements, Fletcher, will be present to answer questions about the legal process specific to those assigned to Little Rock Air Force Base.

"We are very lucky to have such a knowledgeable attorney to come and provide information about relative adoption to our Airmen and their families," said Katherine Milligan, 19th Force Support Squadron community readiness consultant. "An attorney's time and expertise are very valuable, and Ms. Fletcher is volunteering her time to inform and assist our Little Rock AFB community."

"The court's main concern is the best interest of the child," Fletcher said.

Milligan will also be attending the workshop to get a solid understanding of the rules and laws so the A&FRC can continue to have this class in the future for those who will miss this meeting.

For more information about relative adoption or to register, call 501-987-2667.

Operation Restore Angel

Vietnam-era helicopter gets new lease on life

STORY AND PHOTOS BY MASTER SGT. JEFF WALSTON
913TH AIRLIFT GROUP

After more than a year of hard work, military and community members gathered for a ribbon cutting ceremony which unveiled a newly restored static helicopter affectionately known as a “Huey.”

On Nov. 9, 2015, a cold and cloudy Saturday morning, members of the 913th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, 913th Airlift Group, took part in the dedication ceremony at the Jacksonville Museum of Military History, signaling the end of their restoration efforts.

Years of presiding in front of the museum had taken a toll on the Bell UH-1 Iroquois. The iconic Vietnam-era helicopter was in desperate need of repair when a decision was made to restore the aircraft’s original paint scheme.

From the beginning, there were a number of challenges that could have doomed the project had it not been for the dedication of many different individuals and groups.

“Estimates were high for the restoration of the Huey, which were actually based on prior expenditures for the museum’s F-105D Thunderchief,” said DannaKay Duggar, museum director. “They ranged from $30,000 -50,000, which included labor, materials and equipment rentals to do the work while it was still on the pedestal at the museum.”

Last spring’s “A Night at the Victory Canteen,” a World War II themed fundraiser held by the museum helped raise needed funds to pay for the project. The show included a dinner, a live and silent auction, and donations.

But ... it didn’t generate enough money.

Money was one problem and labor was another.

By a stroke of luck, Duggar met U.S. Air Force Col. Edsel Frye Jr., then-913th commander at Little Rock Air Force Base, Arkansas.

“During our conversation, he told me that, ‘If you ever need help with any (museum) projects let me know. We are all about community engagement,’ Duggar said, who then made a call to Frye for help with the project, “Operation Restore Angel.”

Airmen from the 913th Maintenance Squadron stepped up to assist. The initial plan was to complete the restoration work while the Huey was still on the pedestal, as it was done with the F105, but cost became a major factor.

“There were many cost and safety factors of doing the work while it was still on the pedestal,” said Chief Master Sgt. Ralph E. Babcock II 913th MXS superintendent. “It was more effective to take it down.”

Once down, the restoration team needed a suitable place to work on the helicopter.

“One of the biggest obstacles was finding a place out of the weather, for little or no cost to the museum, that could accommodate the Huey for the length of time it would take to complete the restoration work,” said Senior Master Sgt. Harry Watson 913th MXS aircraft electrician supervisor.

That place ended up being the Jacksonville City Recycling Center, not far from the museum, and in little more than two months of actual hands-on work from civilians and military went into restoring the Huey at the recycling center.

“It’s taken us a while to get here, but it’s been good for the organization to do work of this magnitude,” Watson said. “It’s been such a positive experience working and interacting with the community, who is always so very supportive of us.”

Those attending the dedication ceremony expressed their appreciation for all the energy, planning and hours of work that went into the restoration.

One of those was Sam Grimes, a crew chief on the Huey for a nine-month period from April 1967 through January 1968, during the Vietnam War. Grimes travelled from Snowflake, Arizona, with his wife of 35 years, Trudy, to be part of the dedication ceremony.

“She looks beautiful. It looks better than what I had,” Grimes said. “The best part, it’s not on a scrap pile where so many end up.”

U.S. Air Force Master Sgt. Michael Jester, a 913th Maintenance Squadron fabrication flight chief at Little Rock Air Force Base, is seen working on a Bell UH-1C Iroquois helicopter at the city’s recycling center just outside the Air Force base in Jacksonville on Oct. 9. Dannakay Duggar, director of the Jacksonville Museum of Military History and Senior Master Sgt. Harry Watson, an aircraft electrician supervisor assigned to the 913th Maintenance Squadron, record the placement of a newly restored Bell UH-1C Iroquois helicopter back on its display pedestal in Jacksonville on Nov. 4. The return of the Vietnam era helicopter to the museum marks the end of a restoration project that started in June. Military and civilian communities came together to restore the aircraft for future generations to see at the museum.

The Airmen were moving a newly restored Vietnam era Bell UH-1C Iroquois helicopter to a staging area so it could be returned to the Jacksonville Museum of Military History the next day.

A group of U.S. Air Force Airmen assigned to the 913th Airlift Group at Little Rock Air Force Base assisted in restoring the Vietnam era helicopter to its original combat color scheme and then returned it to the Jacksonville Museum of Military History for display.

2016 AFIT Call for Nominations

This year, there are four AY16 allocations available for the Enlisted to Air Force Institute of Technology Advanced Academic Degree program. Applicants must meet all qualification criteria as outlined in the application instructions from AFIT. For more information and instructions, go to: <http://www.afit.edu/ADMISSIONS/facdir.cfm> or you can contact Master Sgt. Bryan Williamson: bryan.williamson@us.af.mil.

Booster Club Opportunity

Community groups can raise funds for their worthy causes while spreading some holiday cheer as the LRAFB Exchange is actively soliciting partners for the Army & Air Force Exchange Service's annual community gift wrap program.

During peak holiday seasons, the LRAFB Exchange sets up tables and provides supplies that community volunteer groups can use to wrap gifts in exchange for donations. Interested organizations can contact the Base Exchange at 501-988-1180 for information on scheduling a time to participate.

"Your Holiday Bill Is On Us"

The Army & Air Force Exchange Service is making holiday wishes come true for military shoppers by picking up the tab on their Military Star card up to $8,200 with the "Your Holiday Bill Is On Us" sweepstakes. From Nov. 1 through Dec. 31, shoppers will be automatically entered in the worldwide sweepstakes each time they use their Military Star card to pay for purchases at the Little Rock AFB Exchange or on shopmyexchange.com. Each transaction counts as one entry.

Three grand-prize winners will receive their Military Star card bill paid in full up to $8,200 with a minimum prize of $2,500. Ten second-prize winners will be awarded a $1,000 credit on their Military Star card statement, while 25 third-place winners will earn a $500 credit. Winners with a balance less than their prize amount will receive a credit on their account. "With this sweepstakes, the Exchange is making dreams come true and changing lives," said General Manager, Al Fuentes. "Just one swipe of a Military Star card is all it takes to enter." Winners of the "Your Holiday Bill Is On Us" sweepstakes will be announced on or about Jan. 30.

Native Arkansan and Tuskegee Airman Milton Crenshaw passed away Wednesday at age 96 in Atlanta.

He was one of the first African Americans and first from Arkansas to have a civilian pilot license.

Crenshaw trained cadets in the 1940s at the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama. He helped begin a flight program at Philander Smith College in Little Rock.

He served in the U.S. Army Air Corps and the U.S. Air Force between 1941 and 1983.
