At 5:32 p.m. on Sept. 4, 1957, Capt. Robert Dupras entered his landing pattern to conclude a two-hour test hop in B-47E 52-0220. As he attempted to lower the forward main landing gear on approach to Little Rock AFB, the gear did not lower. For the next 16 hours, Dupras and his crew circled over the base attempting to lower the landing gear 65 times without success. After all attempts failed, the aircraft commander attempted a landing with gear up. The fire department covered the runway with foamite before the crew landed. Once on the ground, the crew abandoned the aircraft without incident and the fire department, as a precautionary measure, used foamite on the engines. The amount of damage to the aircraft was considered negligible and the aircraft returned to service after cleaning the engines and replacing sheet metal. The manufacturer of the aircraft, Boeing Airplane Company, found during the incident investigation that the lock rod inside the lock release tube was broken at a point adjacent to the upper lock jaw of the gear. It was considered an isolated incident. The crew of the B-47E, assigned to the 384th Bombardment Wing, consisted of Dupras, pilot; 1st Lt. Joseph Fearnø, co-pilot; and Capt. Edward Wieland, bombardier.

Little Rock AFB hosts Arkansas Military Expo

By Airman Grace Nichols
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The free family-friendly Arkansas Military Expo is coming to Little Rock Air Force Base on Saturday, Sept. 17. Team Little Rock will be opening its gates to welcome community partners on the anniversary of the U.S Air Force.

“We are going to bring all facets of our military, our reservists, our citizen soldiers, our Guardsmen, our active duty, our civilians and our contractors and showcase what they bring to the fight on behalf of the state of Arkansas and the nation each and every day,” said U.S. Air Force Col. Charles Brown, 19th Airlift Wing commander.

The event will include festivities such as aircraft demonstrations, static displays, a C-130J cargo drop demonstration and multiple vendors.

The event will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with the Vandenberg Gate opening at 9 a.m.

AERIAL EVENTS

C-130

The C-130 is a cargo aircraft capable of operating from rough, dirt strips and is the prime transport for airdropping troops and equipment into hostile areas.

The C-130 can accommodate a wide variety of oversized cargo, including everything from utility helicopters and six-wheeled armored vehicles to standard palletized cargo and military personnel.

C-17 Globemaster III

The C-17 Globemaster III is the newest, most flexible cargo aircraft to enter the airlift force. The C-17 is capable of rapid strategic delivery of troops and all types of cargo to main operating bases or directly to forward bases in the deployment area. The aircraft can perform tactical airlift and airdrop missions and can transport litter and ambulatory patients during aeromedical evacuations when required. T-6

The T-6 is fully aerobatic and features a pressurized cockpit with an anti-G system, ejection seat and an advanced avionics package with sunlight-readable liquid crystal displays.

Warbirds

Warbirds are retired military aircraft that have been restored to flying condition.

MQ-1B Predator

The MQ-1 is an armed, multi-mission, medium-altitude, long-endurance remotely piloted aircraft that is employed primarily as an intelligence-collection asset and secondarily against dynamic execution targets.

In addition to the wide-array of aircraft on display, there will be other events and activities including bouncy castles and static displays, providing fun for the whole family.

“This surrounding community has built this base,” said U.S. Air Force Col. Christopher Bennett, 19th AW vice commander. “Doing things like the Arkansas Military Expo this fall is just one little way we can say thank you and communicate how much we value that partnership just a little bit more.”

Public Health teams up with ADH on mosquito control

By Tammy Reed
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The Zika virus, and the associated health effects, is a fast growing public health concern and the base along with local medical officials are working to ensure we are prepared.

Representatives from the Arkansas Department of Health and personnel from the 19th Aerospace Medical Squadron Public Health flight met at the 19th Medical Group on July 27, 2016, for training on mosquito-borne illnesses and educating the public about them.

“The training not only focused on Zika, but more importantly on the mosquito, the vector that transmits the virus. Mosquitoes transmit more than just Zika. Here in Arkansas mosquitos have the potential to transmit diseases such as West Nile, Dengue and a multitude of other viruses. Currently there have been no reported cases of locally transmitted Zika virus in Arkansas. However, there have been six reported cases of travel associated Zika within the state,” said U.S. Air Force Maj. Earl Thomas, 19th AMDS Public Health Flight Commander.

The training also focused on vector surveillance and control along with disease prevention. They discussed how to determine which types of mosquitoes are present through the use of traps and surveying for larva in water sources.

“We have submitted over 800 samples from LRAFB and surrounding counties for disease testing. So far all have tested negative for disease,” Thomas said.

Finally, different avenues on how to educate the public about preventing mosquitoes from breeding around homes was discussed.

“One of the keys to controlling the mosquito species that transmits Zika and other diseases is understanding that they prefer man-made habitats and do not fly far from where they breed,” he said.

“These mosquitoes are actually breeding close by, in environments we [help] create around our homes and workplaces.”

Health experts emphasized looking around homes and removing any standing water. Everything from a small children’s pool in the backyard and water puddling on tarps, to clogged gutters and planters with water in trays are prime breeding grounds for these mosquitoes. Taking action to eliminate these breeding areas is the most effective means of controlling these mosquitoes.

Keeping mosquitoes from breeding is key; but once mosquitoes have developed, the next important step is not to be bitten.

“The key to insect repellants is to use products tested for safety and effectiveness. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommend several effective compounds such as DEET, Picaridin, IR3535 and Oil of lemon eucalyptus, Thomas said. “Using products that contain these compounds and using them according to the label is the safest and most effective way to reduce the risk of mosquito bites when outside.”

The community can augment personal protection methods mentioned above with other readily available products.

“The little fans that you clip on that release DEET are great for sitting on your deck or in the bleachers at a sports event,” Thomas said. “The citronella products also help to keep them away from you. Unlike many other species, these mosquitoes don’t fly just during twilight, they will fly and feed during the day as they require a meal.

“Mosquitoes are attracted to our breathing, specifically the (carbon dioxide) we breathe out, and our body heat. They are specially adapted to search us, or any other warm-blooded meal out,” he said. “Whether you are at work (outside), sitting in the shade of your deck, working in your garden or out for a walk make sure you take proper precautions; if not, you are just ringing their ‘dinner bell.’”

For more information on the Zika virus and avoiding mosquito bites, contact the 19th AMDS Public Health office or visit www.cdc.gov/zika/.

Taking back their health

By Jeff Vaughn

19th Aerospace Medical Squadron

Heather Baxter works as a civilian in the 19th Force Support Squadron civilian personnel flight through the week and serves as a captain on the weekend in the Air National Guard. She is another person who's transformed her body and her health with diet and exercise.

So Heather, what made you decide to become consistent with diet and exercise routine?

I have always been into fitness, however over the years my routine was up and down. I would stick with something for a while, especially preparing for the PT test, and then drop off shortly afterwards. I worked really hard to get in shape after the birth of my first child and preparation to attend commissioning school. Not long after returning, I became pregnant with my second child. It was after his birth, that I realized that I needed something long term and my boss told me about the Vital 90. I decided to try it and was hooked from there. It had a sense of community that made you want to do better and show up every day. I no longer wanted to be in the cycle of six months on, six months off preparing for my physical fitness test. I knew this type of approach for exercise was going to be the turning point for me to stay fit all year long. While attending Vital 90, I began to learn more about proper nutrition. I have always considered myself a healthy eater, but quickly realized what I thought was healthy was not necessarily as healthy as I had thought. I have learned a significant amount about nutrition over the last couple of years.

Can you tell us the difference between how you previously trained to get ready for your PT test and how you train now?

I would train to the test and feel like working out was a chore. Running 2-3 miles a day and practicing pushups and situps. Since doing Vital 90 and CrossFit, I now understand how other forms of exercise can help you achieve your goals and as a result have improved my fitness score significantly.

What is the most significant change you've made in your training program?

Adding strength training is the most significant change I've made. My former routine did not include it at all. Strength training is the core of my program now.

What is the most important lesson you've learned through your fitness journey?

I have learned that you don't have to be the picture perfect fitness model to be fit. Everyone's body is different and we all come in different shapes and sizes.

Which is the most difficult battle when it comes to fitness: the mental or physical battle?

I would say mental because there are many times that I view a workout and sometimes tell myself there is no way I can do that, but I have a support team of friends and coaches in my community that quickly help me realize that I can do this. Never underestimate the power of a great support team.

Do you have a favorite training method?

CrossFit -- it's something different all the time and has really help me increase my strength.

Do you have a diet strategy? Explain.

Yes, I try to make the healthiest choices I can in any given situation. I am not perfect, but I see food way differently than before. I meal prep for the week to keep myself on track.

SUBMITTED PHOTO

Heather Baxter has transformed her body and health by regulating her diet and dedicating time to fitness. The Vital 90 class helped Baxter take charge of her health after the birth of her second child.

What is the most significant change you've made in your diet?

I stopped eating processed food. When I thought I ate healthy before, it was a lot of so-called "diet food," pre-packaged portions, cereals, low-fat, etc. Those things don't have a place in my regular diet any longer and learned that eating the right kind of healthy fats and good carbohydrates (vegetables) are actually better for you. I am much more cognizant of what I choose to put in my body now.

Do you have a go to food and what is it?

Sweet potatoes; I eat so many and I pair them with and a good steak.

How has being consistent with exercise changed your life?

I don't cycle in and out of being fit anymore, which in turn makes me ready for my physical fitness test all year instead of leading up to it. I have more energy to play with my kids and for life in general. It also helps me with everyday tasks through functional fitness movements.

What advice do you have for Airmen who are struggling with their fitness assessment and weight?

"Fitness is a journey – not a destination – you must continue for the rest of your life," said Dr. Kenneth H. Cooper.

This quote finally set in for me. My destination was always my physical fitness test or losing a certain amount of weight. I would tell airmen struggling to never give up; we all have to start somewhere and you have to want to take that first step forward. Seek out advice if you need help from peers, friends, your physical training leader, Health and Wellness Center staff, etc. Finding a friend who will work out with you or encourage your fitness goals. My best friend and I attend CrossFit together and look forward to our time together there. We push each other to be better.
