RESPONDING TO IRMA

LRATB DELIVERS MEDICAL PROFESSIONALS TO FLORIDA

PAGES 8-9

Staff Sgt. Kyle Chambasian, 19th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron flying crew chief, unloads medical equipment from a C-130J assigned to the 41st Airlift Squadron on Sept. 9 at Orlando International Airport, Fla. The 41st AS delivered medical personnel from state Disaster Medical Assistance Teams and U.S. Public Health Rapid Deployment Force personnel to Florida to prepare for Hurricane Irma relief efforts. Response teams brought triage kits, pharmaceuticals and basic medical supplies for relief efforts.

To the Airmen of the United States Air Force:

Today we remember the lives lost in the tragic 9/11 attacks on our homeland. For sixteen years, the men and women of the United States Air Force along with our joint teammates have taken the fight to the enemy on and off of our soil as we pursue those who wish Americans harm and threaten our way of life.

Many of you joined the Air Force in the aftermath of this terrible day, moving toward the sound of the guns in order to take on your role in this fight and share the honor of service to a grateful nation in a time of war. Let us not forget the Airmen who now carry the wounds of these wars with them forever, and those who made the ultimate sacrifice on our behalf. The debt of gratitude we owe these men and women, as well as our Gold Star families, can never be repaid nor forgotten.

As we reflect on 9/11, let us honor the memories of all service members, first responders, and fellow Americans we lost, by renewing our commitment to Integrity, Service, and Excellence while delivering dominant air and space power to own the high ground and defend the nation.

We are honored to serve with you.

Little Rock Air Force Base received various aircraft and their crews assigned to multiple military installations along the east coast in preparation for Hurricane Irma on Sept. 9.

Personnel from Hurlburt Field, Florida, along with U-28As, CV-22 Ospreys, MC-130H Combat Talon II's and other aircraft bedded down here until the bad weather was over.

Hurricane Irma, which had a potential to increase to a Category 5 storm, threatened a large part of the eastern seaboard and aircraft along the potential path relocated as a precaution to ensure the least amount of damage.

The relocation to Little Rock AFB ensured aircraft and aircrews from those installations were out of harm's way until they could return to their home station.

"Our military weather professionals continue to monitor Hurricane Irma," said Col. Christopher Lambert, 19th Airlift Wing vice commander, before the hurricane hit. "We stand ready to support our brothers and sisters in arms and our thoughts and prayers are with the communities affected by the storm."

Additionally, leadership announced Little Rock AFB is standing by to deploy any assets needed if ordered to the recovery and aid in the wake of Hurricane Irma's destruction.

Air Force delivers doctors, aid to Florida

By Capt. Ryan DeCamp

Three C-17s from Joint Base Charleston, South Carolina and Dover Air Force Base, Del., flew more than 300 doctors, nurses and other medical professionals to Orlando, Fla., on Sept. 9 in anticipation of Hurricane Irma's landfall Sept. 10.

"When the world presents a challenge, our Airmen adjust to meet the need and do what it takes to accomplish the mission," said Gen. Carlton Everhart II, Air Mobility Command commander. "Our Airmen are mission ready and prepared to help others impacted by Hurricane Irma while meeting worldwide needs."

The mission came at the request of the Department of Health and Human Services, which is coordinating the federal medical and public health medical support to states and territories impacted by one of the largest hurricanes in history.

"Across the federal family, we are committed to meeting the needs of local communities, especially in times of crises," said Dr. Robert Kadlec, HHS assistant secretary for preparedness and response. "With the help from our partners at (the Department of Defense), our medical personnel now are positioned to provide medical care after the storm, whether

The 41st Airlift Squadron transported more than 100 medical personnel to Orlando, Fla., on Sept. 9 to prepare for Hurricane Irma relief efforts.

The 41st AS flew to Dallas and Houston, Texas, to pick up U.S. Public Health Service Rapid Deployment Force personnel and Disaster Medical Assistance Teams from Alabama, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee and Ohio, and their medical equipment.

“Our mission is to assist in response to Hurricane Irma,” said Ronda Lacey, AL-1 DMAT commander. “We’re here to help the state of Florida and the people who are in need of medical assistance there. It’s an honor to help our country in this critical time.”

Doctors, registered nurses, mid-level technicians, a dentist and an infectious disease specialist were among the USPHS and DMAT personnel who were pre-staged to support potential relief efforts. The responders brought a variety of skillsets as well as medical equipment such as pharmaceuticals, oxygen tanks, triage kits and basic first aid supplies.

USPHS and DMAT teams prepare in advance to respond to critical events, similar to the 41st AS.

“We’re ready to respond because of the training we do for this,” said Staff Sgt. Efrain Huereque, 41st Airlift

Squadron loadmaster. “Even though we don’t get to do this often, it’s very rewarding; it feels good to help people in need.”

The relationship between DMAT and USPHS allows them to provide care for those affected by Hurricane Irma. The partnership of these civilian agencies with the U.S. Air Force secures mission success for immediate medical care.

“It’s a joint effort,” said Jessica Picanzo, TN-1 DMAT nurse paramedic. “We received a notification 12 hours ago, and now we’re in the air. We’re able to respond so quickly because of our military partners.”

State Disaster Medical Assistance Teams and U.S. Public Health Rapid Deployment Force personnel gather their luggage and medical supplies after arriving in a C-130J assigned to the 41st Airlift Squadron, at Orlando, Fla., on Sept. 9. The 41st Airlift Squadron, stationed at Little Rock Air Force Base delivered medical response teams to Florida to prepare for relief efforts after Hurricane Irma.

they're needed at overwhelmed hospitals or for residents taking refuge in evacuation shelters."

The team landed just before midnight in Orlando, dropped off medical teams to waiting busses and left as the edge of the storm began reaching the airport. As they took off, rain from Hurricane Irma's storm-front began to pelt the C-17's windshield. Meanwhile, in Washington, D.C., C-17s from Dover AFB loaded more health care professionals in a race against Mother Nature. The C-17 departed Washington, D.C. for Florida at about 12:40 a.m.

"I had no idea I would ever be doing anything like this, or be a part of a national effort to help out in hurricane relief," said Staff Sgt. Rob Lummus, 15th Airlift Squadron loadmaster. "It's been pretty amazing to watch all the different pieces of the puzzle with all the groups working together."

The mission to deliver medical teams to Florida is one small piece of the overall response to Irma, led by the state of Florida and the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Other agencies like the DoD and HHS are working to support the state where needed.

Aircraft and crews from JB Charleston evacuated from their base ahead of Hurricane Irma and are now operating out of other bases such as Scott AFB, Illinois, Barksdale AFB, Louisiana and Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. They are currently assigned to provide aeromedical evacuation and airlift to areas affected by the hurricane.

Tim Nguyen, one of the 452 people on board the C-130A that was the last flight out of Saigon on April 29, 1975. That same aircraft rests outside the front gates of Little Rock Air Force Base as a reminder of the willingness of the U.S. government to help others, no matter the danger. Nguyen spoke at the Community Council luncheon Sept. 11 at Hangar 1080 about his determination to work for the company that makes the C-130 aircraft because he credits that aircraft with saving his life.
