Make a difference

By Chief Master Sgt. Mike Heath

30th Medical Group

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AFNS) — Will you make a difference in someone else's life today? We have all heard someone say, "Take care of your people and their families." Have you ever stopped to think why we hear this so often?

As Airmen, our number one responsibility is to accomplish the mission. However, without smart, dedicated, hard-working people and the unconditional support of their families, the mission would not get accomplished. This philosophy is not new. In fact, it's been a fundamental concept in our Air Force culture for many years, but are we truly putting forth our best effort on a daily basis to be involved in the lives of our people and understand the needs of our Airmen?

Genuinely caring for your Airmen is essential and helpful when providing honest and realistic performance appraisals. Mentor those whose development with which you are charged. Make sure they can do your job someday. Teach them from your experiences — the good, the bad and the ugly.

Share your successes and failures and tell them how you handled them. Make it a teaching moment so you can make them better leaders.

Taking the time to develop Airmen is not an easy task and it's not something that can be done only online or by computer based training. It takes human interaction, patience, effort, and an ability to evolve. Enable and motivate people to accomplish the mission. Give a sense of accomplishment and make sure they are recognized for it. If done properly, no doubt you will instill confidence in others and ensure the success of tomorrow's leaders.

It's not about you. It's about other people. When you take care of your people, help them accomplish their goals and live up to their potential, and great things will happen. Not only will the mission get accomplished, but innovation and excellence will ensue. These things can happen when you realize it's not about you and you take care of your people. You and I share a common blessing in that we are members of the finest country in the world. I have faith that you will endeavor to make our country even better in the future by making a difference in someone else's life today.

I was entrusted with the incredible responsibility to be a supervisor more than 25 years ago. I started something that first morning as I prepared for work. As I was so proudly putting on my Air Force uniform I looked into the mirror and said, "Will you make a difference in someone else's life today?" I have asked that question every day since. When I get home at the end of my duty day, as I take off my uniform, I look in that mirror again and ask myself, "Did you make a difference in someone else's life today?" Sometimes the answer is no, so what do I do the next day? Try harder!

So I ask you; will you make a difference in someone else's life today? If you do, it could inspire an Airman for a lifetime.

MSG CORNER

■ The Vandenberg Boulevard construction project continues its last phase. Traffic is now two ways and the speed limit is 25 mph. Inbound traffic must continue on Vandenberg to Sixth Street and cannot turn onto Arnold Drive or Thomas Avenue. Outbound traffic may access the main gate via Thomas Avenue or Vandenberg. The right hand turn from outbound Vandenberg Boulevard onto Thomas Avenue is now open.

■ Construction on and around the fitness center begins this week and includes roof repairs and new sidewalk construction. Vehicle access and the main sidewalk from the parking lot to the facility will remain open. Portions of sidewalks near the parking lot may be closed for a short duration for safety.

■ Sewer main construction around the WarFit track continues this week. The parking lot and drive will remain accessible.

■ Sidewalk repairs begin next week in front of the Youth Center by the base lake.

■ Military Personnel Section/24-hr Fitness/Civilian Personnel Section will have limited service Sept. 23 after 1:30 p.m.

In September 1957, the first nine African-American students attempting racial integration at Central High School in Little Rock faced much opposition from the community, the school and local leaders. President Dwight D. Eisenhower on Sept. 24, 1957, ordered soldiers assigned to the 101st Airborne Division to escort the students into the high school and to provide protection. C-130s operated by 50th Troop Carrier Squadron crews stationed at Sewart Air Force Base, Tenn., delivered the 101st Airborne Division soldiers. For the 50th TCS, airlifting the soldiers to Little Rock was the unit's first operational C-130 mission.

U.S. Air Force Maj. Jonathon Ferricher, 714th Training Squadron officer in charge of the International Military Student Office, supports the needs of international students as they transition from their respective countries to the 314th Airlift Wing and 189th Airlift Wing for all C-130 training. The IMSO works to establish lasting relationships and immerses students in American culture.

Training international students for success

By Airman Kevin Sommer Giron
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

As the cornerstone of C-130 combat airlift, the 314th Airlift Wing touches all corners of the globe, training Airmen and international service members to become premier combat airlifters.

Nations from around the world send their C-130J and H model aircrews to the C-130 Center of Excellence, an international C-130 training school, where students learn career-specific fundamentals of combat airlift.

“We train international students in all aircrew positions including pilots, loadmasters and of course aircraft maintainers,” said U.S. Air Force Master Sgt. Larry Holland, 714th Training Squadron NCO in charge of the International Military Student Office.

Since the wing’s transition to the J model, the 314th AW works hand-in-hand with the 189th Airlift Wing to train the international C-130H students. Annually, they educate and train 100 to 200 international students from more than 47 allied nations.

“(Length of training) varies year-to-year depending on the requirement,” Holland said. “While our first priority is training our Airmen, with more countries buying the C-130J, the airframe is growing and we keep stepping forward.”

International students receive a curriculum tailored to their career field’s needs. Classes swap from one week in length for a refresher course, to eight months for initial training.

“For the most part, the students train in our aircrafts and on the flight simulator. Just like our U.S. students — we are able to send them out of here fully trained,” said Holland.

For some students, visiting a foreign country can be an exciting yet intimidating experience. That is why the IMSO works to establish lasting relationships and immerses students in American culture on a personal level.

“The IMSO team works to make sure students have all the support they need so when they come here, they can focus on getting the training their countries need and that we can provide,” said U.S. Air Force Maj. Jonathon Ferricher, 714th TRS officer in charge of the IMSO.

The students have an opportunity to participate in the Field Studies Program managed by the IMSO team. The program allows for voluntary visits to sites such as Hot Springs, Arkansas, and Memphis, Tennessee.

“The impact we have on them is further reaching than the tactical airlift expertise that we train them on,” Ferricher said. “We also teach them about American culture and what our society is like. I think that’s valuable because it helps them to understand America, and it leaves a lasting impression as they go back to their countries.

Staying grounded at expo

By Staff Sgt. Regina Edwards
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Not into planes? No problem. The 2016 Military Expo at Little Rock Air Force Base on Sept. 17 offers attractions to keep your feet on the ground and eyes in the skies.

Witness the excitement of the Arkansas Circus Acts, or jam with the 106.7 The Ride DJ. Once those calories are burned from dancing, one can quench his thirst or feed her hunger by dining from one-or more-of the approximately 40 food vendors.

Static displays of an R-11 fuel truck, up-armored HUMVEE and a UH-60

Blackhawk helicopter will be available accompanied by a weapons display of the M9, M249 and M500. There will even be a few drones present such as the RQ 11-B RAVEN Unmanned Aerial Vehicle. Subject matter experts will be present to answer questions of inquiring minds.

Children have a place to cool off and have fun as well. There is going to be a Kid Zone loaded with activities ranging from rock climbing, a petting zoo to a bouncy house. Entry fees and activity prices are available on the Rockin' at the Rock website: <http://www.rockinattherock.com/arkansasmilitaryexpo.shtml>.

Even if aerial events don't cause one's interest to take flight, they'll be plenty more events to keep a person grounded into the expo.

For more information on the event, visit the official Little Rock Air Force Base Military Expo Facebook event page: LRAFB – Arkansas Military Expo.

Politics and social media

By Airman Grace Nichols
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

With election season heating up, it's important to remember the rules service members and Department of Defense civilians must adhere to.

"There are plenty of ways you can still get involved — and you should," said U.S. Air Force Capt. Stephanie Howell, 19th Airlift Wing judge advocate. "Although military personnel are encouraged to vote, engaging in political activities is prohibited."

When stating their political opinions, service members must avoid the inference that their views are supported or endorsed by the DOD or a specific branch of service.

On social media, service members and DOD civilians may become a "friend" of or "like" the Facebook page, or "follow" the twitter account of a political party or partisan candidate, campaign, group or cause but cannot

POLITICS AND WORK DON'T MIX
Be aware of DOD policy before you get involved

- ▶ ACTIVE DUTY personnel may express personal opinions on political candidates and issues as well as make monetary contributions to a political campaign or organization and attend political events as a spectator when NOT in uniform.
- ▶ ACTIVE DUTY personnel must not engage in partisan political activities or campaign for a partisan candidate, campaign or cause.
- ▶ ALL DOD PERSONNEL must not engage in political activity while on-duty or in a federal building (including forwarding political emails and posting political messages on any social media outlet).
- ▶ ALL DOD PERSONNEL identified by a social media site as a DOD employee must clearly and prominently state views expressed are those of the individual and not of the DOD.

For more guidance on military members and Air Force civilian employees, reference DODD 1344.10, AFI 51-902 and The Hatch Act invite others to do the same.

"Some activities, although not expressly prohibited, may be contrary to the spirit of the regulation. Be especially careful of posting on social media — it's easy to accidentally step over the line," Howell said. "Campaigning for a candidate, soliciting contributions and marching in or attending a political campaign while in uniform are prohibited."

For a complete list of permissible and prohibited activities, consult DOD Directive 1344.10, Political Activities by Members of the Armed Forces Guidance for Military Personnel.

For more information on what is permissible during an election season, contact the legal office at 501-987-7886.

Get your vote in

The Nov. 8 election is only two months away. If you want to register to vote, visit www.FVAP.gov to complete a registration application and request your absentee ballot.

It's what the Kumiyamas do

By Senior Airman Stephanie Serrano
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

This year marks the 15th Anniversary of the 9/11 attacks. For some, it also marks a reason to serve their country and honor those who lost their lives. U.S. Air Force Master Sgt. Michael Kumiyama, 19th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron career assistance advisor, is one of those people.

As an aircraft maintainer by trade, Kumiyama, who has served as an active-duty service member for 15 years, goes above and beyond to give back to his peers, co-workers and community.

"I've absolutely loved serving in the military," said Kumiyama. "I'm third generation military. It's what the Kumiyamas do: we serve our country."

Kumiyama is currently involved in the Top 3, a privatized organization on base; Fleet Feet, a local running store that he trains with; and Team Red, White and

Success

“Where else could you take 15 to 20 students from 10 to 12 different countries out for a weekend and show them good old fashion American culture?” Ferricher said.

“So far, I’ve learned about the multicultural nature of American society,” said a student from the Nigerian air force. “America is filled with different people of different races with an admirable love for one country. It teaches me that brotherhood and unity is not born solely from similarities in race or language, but also from the idea of oneness as is embodied by the American spirit.”

The wing trains more than 1,300 students, annually, including approximately 200 international students, making it the largest international flight training program.

“As an integrated coalition force doing a common mission, together we can get so much more accomplished than trying to do things on our own,” Ferricher said. “That is the main objective here: building partnerships.”

Service

Blue, a national non-profit organization for veterans.

“The main purpose of Team Red, White and Blue is to get people together,” he said. “We want to get them out of isolation and get them involved with people who care about them and want to help them be a part of the community.”

Kumiyama initially got involved with Team Red, White and Blue a couple years ago through an old supervisor. However, he did not realize the effect it would have on him until he decided to run the Air Force marathon in 2015.

Team Red White and Blue’s chapter in Dayton, Ohio, hosted a pre-race dinner and social for those running the marathon. It was there Kumiyama connected with people from all over the world. He was able to run the race the next day knowing everyone was encouraging each other to do the best they could.

The site he saw that day – with people running with the American Flag or wearing the logo of Team Red, White and Blue as well as the connections made – is what made him really want to be involved.

“The people I have had the opportunity to meet and to impact their lives as well as for them to impact my life is why I continue to stay connected,” Kumiyama said. “We need people. People need each other – whether it’s going out for a run or bike ride – the connection is the biggest thing.”

For the anniversary of 9/11, Kumiyama, together with Team Red, White and Blue, wanted to give back and honor those lives that were lost 15 years ago. The group hosted a 7-mile memorial run that started and ended at the Arkansas State Capitol Building Sept. 11, 2016.

The group ran carrying the American and POW/MIA flag, stopping at each mile to read a dedication card about the seven fallen Arkansans who lost their lives in the 9/11 attacks.

“We just wanted to show our respect to them,” Kumiyama said. “We want to do our best to thank them and honor them for giving their lives.”

Aerial Delivery team ensures knots tied

PHOTOS BY AIRMAN GRACE NICHOLS

The 19th Logistics Readiness Squadron Aerial Delivery section, – comprised of 29 Airmen and 10 civilians – is responsible for rigging, recovering and repairing cargo platforms at Little Rock Air Force.

“Be sure always,” is a mantra the team lives by, reminding them to lean on the Air Force Core Values and each other.

“The phrase instills all of our core values and ensures that when we do something, it is correct – we only get one chance,” said U.S. Air Force Tech. Sgt. Jonathan Ruelle, 19th LRS Aerial Delivery section NCO in charge said. “We depend on each other to perform rigger checks and on everyone doing their job as prescribed.”

The Aerial Delivery team trains at three separate drops zones in Arkansas, operating year-round to ensure the Combat Airlift mission is achieved.

“They give 110 percent,” Ruelle said, “always.”

The aerial delivery team at Little Rock Air Force Base performs 58 percent of the Department of Defense's unilateral airdrop training.

Parachutes deliver cargo platforms to ground forces Sept. 12 at a drop zone in central Arkansas. Each parachute must be checked for holes or broken lines prior to use.

The pallets were returned to the Aerial Delivery shop to be prepared for later use.

Defense Commissary Agency employees Naomi Johnsen, left, and Karen Walker stand in front of a 9/11 memorial wall on Sept. 9 at the commissary on Little Rock Air Force Base. The women created the board, which contains Ground Zero photos and names of approximately 3,000 victims of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks. Several commissary patrons expressed appreciation and were moved by the dedication wall on the 15th anniversary of the events.
