Breaking barriers: Miller nominated as AF Reserve's first 4-star general

ROBINS AIR FORCE BASE, Ga. (AFNS) – Lt. Gen. Maryanne Miller was nominated by President Donald Trump and confirmed by the U.S. Senate for promotion to the rank of general Aug. 20. Miller will become the first Airman in the history of the Air Force Reserve to pin on a fourth star while actively serving. In 2016, she became the first female chief of the Air Force Reserve and commander of the Air Force Reserve Command.

She joined the Air Force in 1981, a distinguished graduate of the ROTC program at Ohio State University. She is a command pilot with more than 4,800 flying hours in numerous aircraft. Prior to her current assignment, she was the deputy to the chief of the Air Force Reserve in Washington, D.C., commanded two wings and held numerous staff positions at the unit, Air Staff and Joint Staff levels.

Miller will become the first reservist to lead Air Mobility Command, a total force mission supported by the Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve.

19TH AIRLIFT WING PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Little Rock Air Force Base, Arkansas, recently celebrated the 70th anniversary of the 19th Airlift Wing being activated.

Team Little Rock members gathered Aug. 17 during a luncheon to discuss the history of the wing, as well as to celebrate what the wing accomplishes today.

“We’re celebrating the 70th anniversary of being stood up as a wing,” said Chris Schack 19th Airlift Wing protocol office deputy chief of protocol. “It’s all fairly neat because it happened 11 months after the Air Force came about.”

Growing into what is now the home of agile combat airlift, the 19th began with the formation of the 19th Bombardment Wing on Aug. 10, 1948. Followed by being changed into the 19th Air Refueling Wing on Sept. 1, 1991.

Adapting to new environments and demands has been a staple of the 19th.

“It was different times and different circumstances,” said Bob Oldham, 19th Airlift Wing protocol office chief of protocol. “We change to fit the need.”

Even after two large-scale changes to the structure of the 19th, it didn’t stop members from adjusting to yet another change after being transformed into the 19th Airlift Wing on Oct. 1, 2008.

“I like that I’m part of a unit that’s been around for so long,” Schack said. “Even with the changes throughout the years. It means a lot to me that we’re recognizing this history.”

Rodney, 19th Airlift Wing black knight mascot, attended the 70th wing anniversary luncheon for photos with attendees on Little Rock Air Force Base on Aug. 17. Rodney was available for photos with event attendees.

Today, the 19th Airlift Wing accomplishes operations across the globe in support of multiple missions with a bright future ahead of it. With such an enduring presence, members of the 19th AW are able to look at the accomplishments of those who came before them to see they stand on the shoulders of giants.

“The wing has a meritorious unit award, and after seeing the rest of the award streamers on the wing’s flag, then you realize that we’ve accomplished quite a bit, and Airmen can take pride in that,” Oldham said.

EXERCISE, EXERCISE, EXERCISE

Airmen hone skills during simulated deployment

STORY BY SENIOR AIRMAN GRACE NICHOLS AND AIRMAN 1ST CLASS KRISTINE GRUEWELL, 19TH AIRLIFT WING PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The 19th Airlift Wing wrapped up ROCK I 18-04, an 11-day, multiphase exercise Thursday showcasing the ability to prepare, deploy and execute its mission to project combat airlift at a moment's notice around the world.

The exercise was a chance for Airmen to learn what to expect when tasked to support contingency operations. The multiphase process keeps Airmen ready for short-notice deployments and allows units to assess and improve their procedures.

"The importance of a multi-phased approach is testing our processes and our Airmen's ability to conduct themselves in a simulated wartime environment in order to provide agile combat airlift and conduct our nation's business," said U.S. Air Force Master Sgt. Bryan McNeal, 19th Communications Squadron cyber transport section chief. "Phase One's purpose was to test Team Little Rock's ability to deploy its Airmen at a moment's notice; Phase Two's purpose was to exercise and validate the training and readiness levels of our Airmen in a simulated wartime environment."

The exercise included simulated noncombatant evacuation operations and airdrop missions, as well as a host of scenarios designed to allow Airmen across the wing to demonstrate the discipline to execute the mission under stressful conditions.

"This exercise was the culmination of a lot of hard work and dedication by our Airmen over the past few months," said U.S. Air Force Col. Gerald Donohue, 19th Airlift Wing commander. "While this training presented one way we could be called upon to project combat airlift, the lessons Airmen learned apply regardless of where or how we are called upon to execute the mission."

Some of the events, such as a simulated fire, communication failures and protests, allowed Airmen to explore scenarios they might not otherwise see often.

"Our Airmen also got the opportunity to freshen up on some of their readiness skills, including but not limited to, radio etiquette, reporting hostile activity, and lifesaving skills in a combat environment," McNeal said. "Airmen need to keep these skills sharpened to protect themselves and their wingmen while securing our nation's freedom."

19th Airlift Wing Inspection Team evaluators took to all sections of the simulated deployed area to assess how Airmen handle readiness during around-the-clock surge operations.

"The point of this exercise was to practice getting our men and women ready at a moment's notice," said U.S. Air Force Senior Master Sgt. Fitzpatrick, 19th Airlift Wing inspector general superintendent. "That consists of everything from getting training done, to processing through the deployment line, to make sure they're ready to go to sustain global operations."

"In the end, I think there's no doubt the exercise was successful, specifically because of the individual efforts of all involved," Donohue said. "I consistently saw Airmen showing the discipline necessary to do the job right, and that's key to improving our full-spectrum readiness capabilities."

Airpower operations highlights from July

By Capt. Mark A. Graff

U.S. Air Forces Central Command Public Affairs

AL UDEID AIR BASE, Qatar – U.S. Air Forces Central Command published its monthly Airpower Summary today highlighting air operations in support of Operation Freedom’s Sentinel in Afghanistan and Operation Inherent Resolve in Iraq and Syria. The full summary may be found at the monthly Airpower Summaries link.

AIRPOWER INCREASES PRESSURE ON TALIBAN TO RECONCILE

After the historic Afghan ceasefire in June, U.S. pilots and aircrews fully resumed in July an air campaign designed to convince the Taliban they can’t win militarily and to pressure them toward reconciliation with the Afghan government.

“The U.S. is committed to supporting the Afghan peace process, the Afghan government and our ANDSF partners fighting from the air and the ground against the Taliban and other nefarious actors who seek to destabilize Afghanistan,” said Lt. Gen. Jeffrey L. Harrigian, Combined Forces Air Component Commander for U.S. Central Command. “However, the fact remains that unless and until the Taliban reconcile, we will strike the enemy to deny them important resources and capabilities.”

For July, strike metrics saw highs across the board as the result of a surge in operations post-ceasefire. The U.S. flew 749 strike sorties, 88 of which included a weapons release. Both are monthly highs this year. Also, the U.S. employed 746 weapons in July, the highest monthly total since November 2010.

“U.S. strikes, coupled with the increasing capability of and strikes by the Afghan Air Forces, strengthens the position of the Afghan government,” said Harrigian. “In support of Afghans and the Afghan government, the U.S. and our international partners will continue using military pressure to drive the Taliban to reconcile.”

To develop targets and monitor the adversary, intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance aircraft flew 1,316 sorties in July, an increase over previous months this year. The increase reflects CENTCOM direction earlier this year to prioritize operations in Afghanistan over those in Iraq and Syria.

U.S. tankers and air mobility assets remain in the fight, as well, with tankers having now refueled more than 10,000 receivers in OFS this year. In July, tankers flew 492 sorties and offloaded more than 19 million pounds of fuel to 1,915 receivers. C-17s and C-130s flew 916 sorties, delivering 6,146 short tons of cargo and more than 10,000 passengers.

AFGHANS IMPROVING WITH SUPPORT OF TRAIN, ADVISE AND ASSIST AIRMEN

In support of the Afghan Air Force, NATO Train Advise and Assistance Command – Air trainers helped Afghans achieve notable milestones in July.

Two UH-60s from Camp Shorab performed their first operational mission for forward deployed UH-60s, July 10, with AAF crews transporting 22 passengers around Helmand province with the support of U.S. TAAC-air advisers. This milestone highlights the rapid success of the AAF UH-60 program, which fields capabilities while continuing to grow and develop.

Also last month, three Afghans were appointed as weapons load trainers. TAAC-air advisers will evaluate and certify them as the first AAF A-29 weapons certifying officials, enabling the AAF the capability to organically train Afghan forces without the need to attend training in the United States.

AIRPOWER VITAL TO DEFEAT-ISIS OPERATIONS, FORCE PROTECTION IN IRAQ, SYRIA

Nearly four years after combat operations began against ISIS, U.S., Coalition and partner forces have devastated ISIS in Iraq and Syria.

of Operation Inherent Resolve, continue to focus on striking the enemy, preparing for the final phase of Operation Roundup – the latest phase in the defeat ISIS campaign – and continuing to protect ground forces from above.

In July, U.S. and Coalition pilots and aircrew flew 1,325 strike sorties. The primary airpower weight of effort remains on force protection, which includes defensive counter air, armed over-watch and close air support missions.

“With airpower overhead, U.S., Coalition and partner ground forces can put more pressure on ISIS in the Middle Euphrates River Valley and in northeast Syria, and can better support Iraqi Security Forces in Iraq as they root out the remnants of ISIS,” said Harrigian. “Let there be no illusions: there is hard fighting ahead in the MERV. But four years into this fight, ISIS’ lasting defeat is upon them thanks to the resolve and hard-fought victories by the Iraqis, Syrian Democratic Forces and the Coalition effort.”

The July sortie total is consistent with the monthly average of 1,353 sorties and on par with the operations tempo since Operation Roundup began May 1. In July, 20 sorties included at least one weapon release, and 292 weapons were released for the month.

Additionally, intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance aircraft flew 419 sorties in July, while tankers flew 797 sorties. Tankers offloaded more than 46 million pounds of fuel to 4,529 receivers.

Airlifters flew 755 sorties in order to deliver 4,053 short tons of cargo and 6,277 passengers ensuring Coalition forces are properly positioned and supplied to hasten ISIS’ defeat.

U.S. ADVISERS ENABLING IRAQI AIR FORCE ACHIEVEMENTS

With the support of the Coalition Aviation Advisory and Training Team and other Coalition advisors, the Iraqi Aviation and Air Defense Enterprise continued to achieve notable milestones in developing more capability in July.

Airmen with the 447th Air Expeditionary Group continue training Iraqi airfield operators to handle airfield operations and take on a more prominent role at many locations. Also, Air Force civil engineers with the CAATT instructed Iraqi civil engineers on supporting air operations during a training course at Camp Taji, Iraq, to build partner capacity.

Finally, with support from Coalition trainers, Iraqi forward air controllers participated in an air controller currency course in July, which included directing simulated strikes by Iraqi helicopters. The “train the trainer” course helps Iraqis train others on forward air control.
