Little Rock Airman gives advice to help ‘Celebrate Life’

A Little Rock Air Force Base Airman, one of 22 from Air Education and Training Command and throughout the Air Force, presented his story of resiliency and his ideas about how to celebrate life Oct. 19 at AETC’s annual Senior Leaders’ Conference at Joint Base San Antonio-Randolph.

Celebrate Life is a program begun in 2016 as a collaborative effort between AETC’s judge advocate, chaplain, public affairs, surgeon general’s offices and the Profession of Arms Center of Excellence. Celebrate Life offers the opportunity for lower ranking Airmen to discuss problems in today’s Air Force with senior leaders, such as programs that are or aren’t working and what they can do better.

“The intent of this (event) was to try to go to the grassroots level and get our young Airmen on a daily basis across our Air Force to talk to them about resiliency and to get their recommendations,” said Lt. Gen. Darryl Roberson, AETC commander.

Between stories of hardship and triumph, the Airmen spent the week exploring each other’s life experiences and the effectiveness of current resiliency programs in the Air Force. They provided senior leaders with their thoughts and recommendations, and the message was clear: Airmen want to connect on a human level.

“I learned some eye-opening things about other people that you’d never know unless you took the time to ask,” said Senior Airman Justin Porter, 314th Maintenance

Senior Airman June Bell, 47th Medical Group troop and a participant of the Celebrate Life panel, shares her story during a break-out group discussion before present at the annual Senior Leaders Conference at Joint Base San Antonio-Randolph, Texas, on Oct. 19. The presentations were the culmination of several days of discussions during the conference in which Airmen were divided into three groups and asked to get to know one another by telling their stories and drawing from one another’s experiences.

Group mission information system manager.

Over the course of the conference presentations to Air Force senior occurred. Airmen were divided into three groups and asked how to get to know one another by sharing their stories and drawing from one another’s experiences.

“It was hard to listen to, because some of the stories were really sad; I’ve learned that communicating with my peers and my supervision is really important,”

Porter said. “I tried to develop a more human aspect to what we do every day.”

After the retreat, Airmen returned to their respective home stations to spread the message about celebrating life because “mission always, people first.”

FY17 closeout complete

By Maj. Casey Walterscheid
19th Contracting Squadron commander

For Airmen of the 19th Contracting Squadron and the 19th Comptroller Squadron, October is a new year – marking the end of September’s crunch time. During which, 19 CONS and 19 CPTS, in concert with the numerous squadron, group and wing resource advisors across Team Little Rock feverishly completed their work to ensure proper execution of each budget on base.

The month of September is the Federal equivalent of Black Friday. 19th CONS obligated a total of 42.5 million dollars in Fiscal Year 2017; nearly one third of those obligations came in the month of September alone. As our Air Force gets smaller and more efficient, contracted team members provide us with key support to ensure Airmen can focus on other aspects of the mission. Through service contracts, the 19th Medical Group was supplemented with 51 additional healthcare providers, increasing capacity by 53 percent. Construction contracts allowed for much needed improvement in Child Development Center and Youth Center facilities. Additionally, upgrades to the existing base entry guardhouses increased the safety and security of 19th Security Forces Squadron personnel as they defend the base. Whether it’s purchasing a new line of fitness equipment for the base fitness center or funding and signing services contracts for the seemingly unending line of road construction on Arnold and Chief Williams Drives, the 19th Airlift Wing’s two smallest squadrons make their impact known across Little Rock AFB and the local community – especially in September.

The impact to our community partners is significant, as well. This past year, 19th CONS awarded contracts totaling $8.2 million to employ companies located in Arkansas. $23.8 million were signed on contracts with corporations performing services in the state of Arkansas. This federal funding feeds directly back into the local area.

As with January’s New Year, the Fiscal New Year brings with it a proverbial reset button and a time of reflection as we move forward into Fiscal Year 2018. The next time September rolls around, recognize your contracted partners for their contributions to national defense and local commerce alike – and know your 19th CONS and 19th CPTS personnel are driving hard to execute the funding that keeps Combat Airlift on target, anywhere, anytime.

Local civic leader receives Air Force Salutes Awards

Dr. Charles Wu, Harding University's Engineering and Physics Department associate professor, received the Air Force Salutes Award on Sept. 20.

The Air Force Salutes award is given to individuals who support the Air Force Recruiting Services. Wu was presented the award by Lt. Col. Joel L. Brown, Tech. Sgt. Jaclyn L. Cole and Master Sgt. Gregory Hite. Wu has been awarded the Air Force recruiting certificate of appreciation in 2014 and 2016.

"He has referred a lot of great students to us and helped out the Air Force," Brown said. "He continues to help out on civic leaderboards, which is great for the country."

Since Wu refers students to the Air Force, Brown regularly conducts officer interviews and reviews transcripts with students from Harding University.

Wu has also organized several seminars at the University through the Air Force Recruiting Service.

In 2016, Wu coordinated with Maj. Rob

Buffard to discuss the Air Force Technical Degree Sponsorship Program with members of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers student chapter. In 2017, Dr. Zane Gastineau, department chair and former Air Force research assistant, spoke to students about Air Force career opportunities.

"This program is targeted specifically toward electrical engineers and, since Harding has an electrical engineering program, they said they would love to get a program started," Wu said. "Normally, we would invite guest speakers once a month to let us know what is going on in the industry, and hopefully, a student would get a job with them as engineers after they graduate."

Wu shared the real joy throughout this process has come from seeing students become successful, not receiving an award.

"I am very excited, but this is the work I have been doing for many years," Wu said. "It is more encouraging to see students that were able to benefit from this."

Cyber security: Every Airman's responsibility

By Airman 1st Class Grace Nichols
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

More than ever before, the world is connected to a vast cyberspace domain. The internet touches most aspects of daily life. With one click of a mouse or swipe of a finger, people can access volumes of information available to all users.

This is why it's imperative for service members and government employees to use their situational awareness when operating within the Department of Defense network, as well as their personal computers.

"According to the local Little Rock Federal Bureau of Investigations report, the highest cyber threat to us in Arkansas is a cyber-scam of non-payment or non-delivery," said Master Sgt. Travis Taylor, 19th Communications Squadron Wing Information Office section chief. "This scam cost Arkansas residents $787,181 in 2016 alone."

October is the month to brush up on online safety as it marks the beginning of National Cyber Security Awareness month.

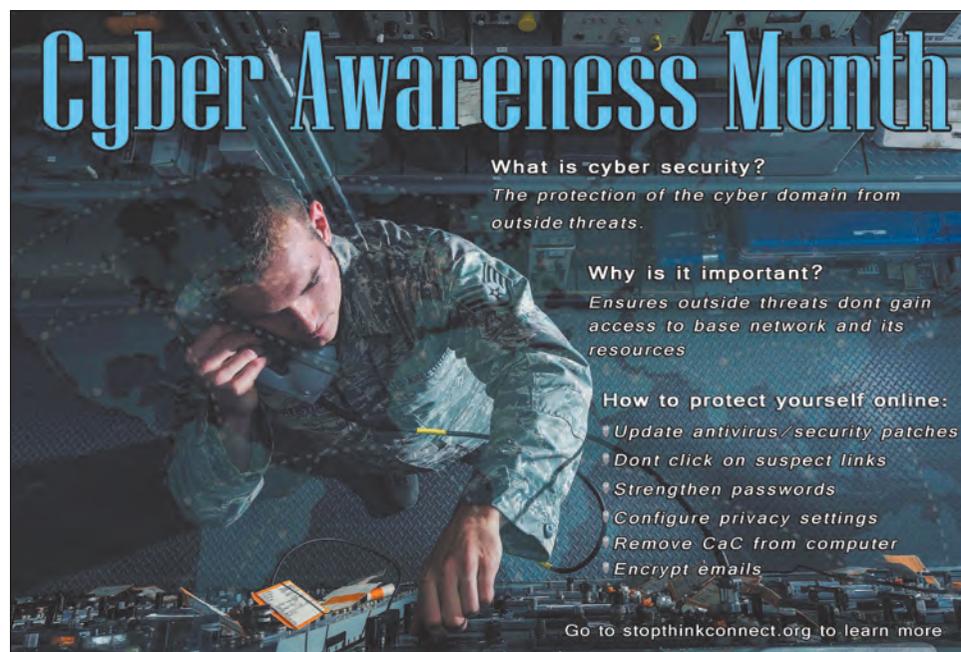

"The purpose of this month is to raise awareness and mitigate the threats we face in cyberspace every day," said U.S. Air Force Maj. Daniel Presland, 19th CES commander. "We want Airmen to understand that the actions they take online have implications in the real world and that there are bad cyber actors, such as cybercriminals, looking to take advantage of those unprepared."

Shopping, banking and connecting with loved ones have become normal online activities. As a result, individuals increasingly share more sensitive information that's highly sought after by cybercriminals – which is why it's critical to secure network connections.

"One way Airmen can increase their cyber awareness is by performing 'cyber hygiene,'" Presland said. "That means taking care of those easy, but fundamental, aspects of cybersecurity."

This includes, but is not limited to:

- Ensuring antivirus software and security patches are up-to-date
- Not clicking on suspicious links
- Strengthening passwords
- Removing common access cards from computers
- Encrypting emails

Staff Sgt. Richard Prestia, a 19th Communications Squadron airfield systems supervisor, performs maintenance on a radio Sept. 3, 2013, at Little Rock Air Force Base. Prestia, a Boyertown, Pa., native, ensures audio and power levels are within the required limits that enable the radio to talk with aircraft at distances of approximately 300 miles.

■ Configuring privacy settings on social media accounts

■ Securing cell phones with password protection

"Cybercriminals will use any vulnerability that exists on your computer's software or infrastructure in order to compromise your machine," Presland said. "By taking those fundamental steps, you are one-step ahead of the adversary."

The goal is to secure Little Rock Air Force Base's network and ensure outside threats do not gain access to information that could compromise base security and its resources.

"Everybody has a piece in ensuring the cyberspace domain remains a safe and secure space to operate within," Presland said. "From the newest Airmen to the highest ranking official, if we don't take vital steps to make sure everyone understands the threats, then we are at risk of adding to those vulnerabilities."

Virtually every mission across the range of military operations depends on cybersecurity.

"Just like air, space and land, we must have command and control of cyberspace," Presland said. "We can't launch aircraft if digital systems are compromised, hacked or brought down, because we lose that vital command and control feature across the base."

Every time Airmen connect to a network, whether at home or at work, decisions are made that affect cybersecurity. From the information Airmen choose to share, to the links they click, online activities can either enable or prevent attacks and intrusions.

Cyber Security Operations: Do your part!

A key risk to our economy and security is the shortage of cybersecurity to professionals to protect our extensive networks.

By 2022, there will be a shortage of 1.8 million information security workers.

Airmen, Civilians and Contractors must do their part to maintain situational awareness, maintain training requirements and think creatively in planning, managing and conducting effective cyber operations, in order to protect the Nation and Air Force five core missions:

- Air and Space Superiority
- Intelligence, Surveillance and Reconnaissance (ISR)
- Rapid Global Mobility
- Global Strike
- Command and Control in and through cyberspace.

Stay safe on Halloween

Thanks to our 19th Security Forces defenders Little Rock AFB will be safe from the ghouls and ghosts of Halloween night. But remember these safety tips to keep your trick-or-treaters safe!

- Walk on sidewalks, not in the streets;
- Cross the street only at corners;
- Wear light-colored or reflective-type clothing so you are more visible;

- Carry a flashlight to light your way;
- Visit homes that have porch light on;
- Accept your treats at the door and never go into a stranger's house;
- Have a grown-up inspect your treats before you eat them;
- Don't eat candy if the package is already opened.

Tips for a spooktacular Halloween

89%* of kids participate in Halloween

73%* of kids go trick-or-treating door-to-door

Remind your child to never enter a stranger's home

Choose a costume that is flame-resistant

Knives, swords and accessories should be made of cardboard or flexible materials

Use nontoxic makeup, testing it in a small area first

Costumes, including shoes, should be well-fitted

Make sure masks have large eye, nose and mouth openings

Be sure to have an adult check candy before children eat it

Fasten reflective tape to the costume for increased visibility, and choose bright colored costumes

Costumes, including shoes, should be well-fitted

Make sure masks have large eye, nose and mouth openings

Be sure to have an adult check candy before children eat it

Halloween is an exciting time for kids, but can be worrisome for parents. This year, leave the fear to spooky movies and pick a costume that's fun - and safe - for your child.
