NATIONAL PHYSICAL THERAPY MONTH

Physical therapy knows your pain

By Maj. Melissa Rose

Physical Therapy Flight commander

Did you know that October was designated as National Physical Therapy Month? This year, Physical Therapists around the nation are using their month to raise awareness about the human toll on the opioid epidemic.

Since 1999, the amount of opioids prescribed per person in the US has tripled, to the point where statistically we could medicate every American continuously for three weeks. Along with this, unintentional overdoses on opioids have also tripled.

Lastly, did you know that if you are Active Duty and on opioids or any class 3 narcotics for more than three months, you will likely have to face an MEB?

Physical Therapy is an amazing tool that can help you overcome pain. Randomized controlled studies have proven that exercise is one of the most effective treatments in overcoming acute and chronic pain.

Also, did you know that as of January

2015, all states have granted Physical Therapy direct access capabilities? This means that all patients have the capability to seek some level of treatment from a licensed physical therapist without a prescription or referral from a physician.

For Little Rock Air Force Base, the 19th Medical Group Physical Therapy Clinic will evaluate and treat any personnel on active-duty status with a musculoskeletal injury or pain. All you have to do is call our clinic to make an appointment.

We also provide running analysis clinics to all Active Duty, retirees, and dependents. These services are also scheduled at the Physical Therapy clinic.

Finally, we also provide semi-custom insoles for all DoD beneficiaries, you may walk-in for this service, free of charge. Our therapists are skilled in orthopedics, sports medicine, dry needling, and spinal manipulation, to name a few of our specialties.

To learn more, feel free to stop by our clinic and pick up a pamphlet or call 501-987-7466.

Crew chief key to combat airlift

By Airman 1st Class Codie Collins
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Did you know that every C-130J on Little Rock Air Force base has a special key? This key doesn't start the plane, it doesn't open the plane, in fact it has no practical purpose with the plane at all. Yet a select few crew chiefs have the honor of receiving this key where exceptional work is the standard.

Little Rock AFB received a C-130J from Lockheed Martin, and its key was awarded to Senior Airman Julian Santiago, 19th Maintenance Squadron dedicated crew chief, Oct. 19, 2017.

There are currently 28 C-130s assigned to the 19th AW and there is a key for each one. The keys to each individual aircraft are presented to knowledgeable crew chiefs who stand out in their career field. Once a key has been given, no other crew chief will receive a duplicate key to the same aircraft.

"It's an honor to receive a key," Santiago said. "I work hard, I but was surprised to be chosen. It's humbling to be the dedicated crew chief for the last C-130J to come to Little Rock AFB."

A crew chief must be technically proficient and prove themselves to be a hardworking, dedicated Airman to be eligible to receive a key.

"Santiago sees tasks through to the end and takes pride in his plane," said Staff Sgt. Jordan Scott, 19th Maintenance Squadron crew chief.

Red Ribbon Week: Drug prevention starts with kids

By 2nd Lt. Hunter Rininger
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

At most Air Force installations, the Drug Demand Reduction program and the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Treatment program are very much separate entities. But here at Little Rock AFB, ADAPT and DDR have teamed up to prevent alcohol and drug abuse amongst service members, their families and the local community.

DDR and ADAPT, the first collaborating teams in the U.S. Air Force, providing prevention and outreach education to base constituents that focus on substance abuse prevention. The ADAPT team focuses on providing the local community with outreach through early drug awareness education. The National Red Ribbon Campaign began in 1985 to provide drug awareness to youth.

“Our goal is to increase our prevention efforts across the Wing in hopes that it will increase the number of self-referrals and decrease the number of substance related incidents that occur each year,” said SSgt Leah Chhoeun, ADAPT Non-Commissioned Officer in Charge here. “Additionally, we hope to increase

Military personnel from Little Rock Air Force Base talk to Tolleson Elementary School students on Oct. 26 during Red Ribbon Week activities. The National Family Partnership provides drug awareness by sponsoring the annual National Red Ribbon Campaign. Since its beginning in 1985, when people across the country began wearing Red Ribbons as a symbol of their commitment to raise awareness of the killing and destruction caused by drugs in America, the Red Ribbon has touched the lives of millions of people around the world.

members’ knowledge of responsible drinking and healthy alternative coping skills.”

This year, LRAFB restored its support in providing drug awareness at Arnold Drive Elementary, Tolleson Elementary and Lawson Elementary. The team serviced over 1,000 students (Pre-K through 5th grade) in the local community. Local ADAPT Counselors, Marine Detachment Substance Abuse Control Officer/Specialists, DDR personnel and 19 SFS K-9 Unit spoke at the schools during Red Ribbon Week.

The team’s efforts have expanded across the Air Force. This year the team developed a prevention model that is currently being used Air Force-wide. The team has managed to double its budget for 2018, which will lead to an expansion of the team’s outreach programs.

As Red Ribbon Week comes to an end, it’s important to remember that the ADAPT and DDR programs at LRAFB are available year-round. The team’s mission is to increase self-identification with any substance abuse issues and their mission can only be accomplished if service members, their families, and the ADAPT/DDR coalition members continue to be mindful of others’ needs.

For more information, contact the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Treatment facility at 501-987-7338. Their office hours are 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Weather Flight first to tackle hurricane season, last to go home

By Airman Rhett Isbell

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Watching the sun slip below the horizon, Airman 1st Class Jacob Phipps, 19th Operations Support Squadron weather apprentice, begins his nightlong vigil.

Acting as the eyes on the sky, Phipps directly participated in the relief efforts of Hurricane Harvey, Hurricane Irma and Hurricane Maria by providing Little Rock Air Force Base with the weather information its members needed to stay safe.

The weather flights area of responsibility is around the Gulf of Mexico. Once a tropical storm or hurricane is charted for that area, they begin notifying base leadership, including the base commander, about its presence and potential threat.

“Our mission is to create timely, accurate, weather products for Team Little Rock members” said Staff Sgt. Jason Parsons, 19th OSS NCO in charge of the weather flight. “They use these products as tools to aide them in their mission of Combat Airlift. Sometimes they’ll even come to us directly to receive them because of the urgency of their mission.”

This aspect of the weather flight’s mission was tested when Hurricane Maria and Hurricane Irma recently struck the southern and eastern coasts. Due to the threats these hurricanes posed, Hulburt Field, Fla., was forced to send aircraft to Little Rock Air Force Base to protect them from high winds and other severe weather.

“We had a lot of aircraft come in because of the hurricanes and we made sure to give them all of the information they needed to stay safe; both in the air and on the ground,” Phipps said. “The aircrew also frequently radio us in flight to check if there was anything they needed to be aware of as they were coming in.”

Aircrews aren’t the only members of Team Little Rock who are affected by the weather. Multiple squadrons have to be notified when dangerous weather is inbound.

“Explosive ordinance disposal, civil engineer squadron and the child development centers have to be informed of bad or severe weather due to the nature of their missions,” Parsons said. “The security forces squadron also falls under that domain and usually gives us a call to try and keep their military working dogs out of the bad weather.”

Looking back at all of these moving parts and the constant production of products those parts required, members of the weather flight found that they were able to execute their mission properly because of their constant training and the experience gained from the hurricanes both last year and this year.

“The biggest thing is being able to see these storms from a long ways out to give ourselves time to properly prepare for them,” Phipps said. “By the time they get close enough to affect us, we’ve already used the information we have to properly inform base members to help them stay safe.”

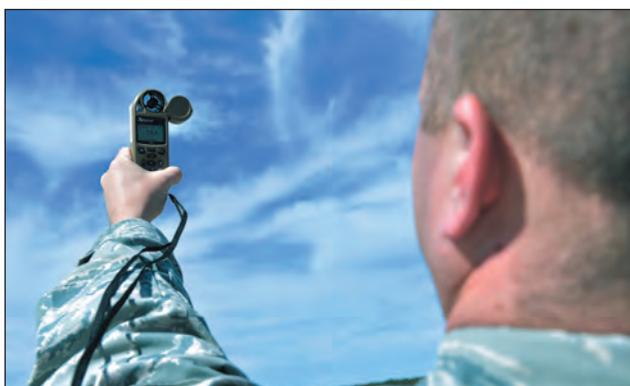

This regular testing during the hurricane season has helped to showcase that no matter what kind of weather is thrown at them Team Little Rock members can and will execute their mission effectively.

“We haven’t stumbled once during hurricane season, and we don’t intend to start now,” Phipps said. “Every part of this base had a really big part to play in hurricane relief and I think they feel the same way.”

Staff Sgt. Jason Parsons, 19th Operations Support Squadron NCO in charge of the weather flight, assembles a Tactical Meteorological Observing System on Oct. 23 at Little Rock Air Force Base. The system is capable of reading multiple aspects of weather including wind direction, cloud height, temperature and dew point.

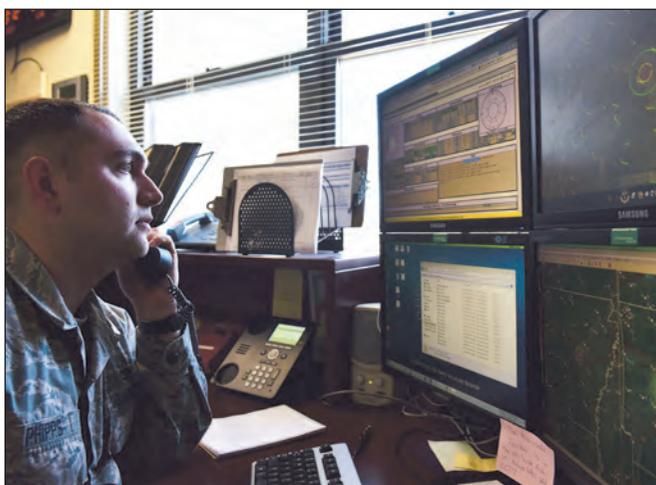

Staff Sgt. Jason Parsons, 19th Operations Support Squadron NCO in charge of the weather flight, checks weather conditions with a Kestrel weather meter Oct. 23 at Little Rock Air Force Base. The Kestrel weather meter is capable of measuring temperature, wind speed, air pressure and other weather conditions.
