JOINT BASE SAN ANTONIO-LACKLAND, Texas (AFNS) – After listening to feedback from the field, a few changes to the Air Force Basic Military Training curriculum will transform trainees into more combat ready Airmen.

The changes, which began Sept. 4, are entirely focused on readiness and lethality, Airmanship, fitness and the warrior ethos.

“The future of BMT focuses on creating disciplined, warrior Airmen who are ready to support our joint partners in conflicts around the globe,” said Col. Jason Corrothers, 737th Training Group and BMT commander. “These changes to refine the basic training experience are about increasing our readiness and lethality while simultaneously instilling Airmanship and core values from the very beginning.”

Restoring readiness is one of the Air Force’s top priorities. The changes address readiness through a revamped expeditionary skills and weapons training curriculum, said Lt. Col. Jose Surita, 326th Training Squadron commander who has overseen the development of the revamped curriculum.

Basic Expeditionary Airmen Skills Training, which previously took place in week five of training, is re-sequenced to the final training week as the culminating event of BMT. Air Force recruits will also experience a beefed up Self-Aid/Buddy Care regimen, called the Tactical Combat Casualty Course.

“We need highly trained and ready Airmen,” Surita said. “Readiness is the central theme across the BMT curriculum as we deliver trained and committed Airmen capable of delivering 21st Century airpower.”

There is also an increased focus on weapons handling and familiarization, she said.

Airmen’s Week, which was focused on a values-based “Airmanship 100” curriculum, was taught the week after a trainee completed basic training. Airmen’s Week lessons, which are not being changed, are now incorporated throughout 8.5 weeks of BMT. This change gives end-to-end ownership of the training to the military training instructor corps, delivering a continuous immersion that accelerates “mind to heart” adoption of the Air Force core values and warrior ethos principles

“Our Airmen need to be technically capable, but they also need to be motivated,” said Master Sgt. Robert Kaufman, military training instructor. “Airmanship 100 lessons focus on their resilience and challenge recruits to commit to holding each other accountable to our core values.”

With an emphasis on improving human performance, BMT will also see a bump up in the overall number of fitness sessions, increasing from 31 to 44 periods throughout training. Workouts will be a balanced mix of cardio, strength and interval training.

“Physical fitness is a critical component of readiness,” said Master Sgt. Andrea Jefferson, military training instructor. “By increasing the number of physical training sessions, we build fitness habits that will help recruits perform both in the military environment, and in their personal lives.”

BMT curriculum changes also includes a purpose built heritage program that introduces recruits to Air Force heroes, and weaves heritage and warrior ethos throughout training.

“We will be introducing warrior identity, as well as Air Force history and heroes, every week throughout training,” said Master Sgt. Richard Bonsra, military training instructor. “Those topics will then be reinforced during all training events, such as naming physical training sessions after a fallen Airman to cement the experience.”

Future changes to how heritage and warrior ethos are ingrained into BMT will include naming obstacles on the “Creating Leaders, Airmen, Warriors,” course after Air Force heroes, said Bonsra.

“Over the last 70 years, we have become the most dominant Air Force the world has ever known, but there is no doubt we must be and can be better in the future,” said Chief Master Sgt. Lee Hoover, 737th TRG superintendent. “The next generation of Airmen will take us there, so it’s critical we start them on the right foot. These changes ensure we move in that direction.”

Headquartered at Joint Base San Antonio-Lackland, Texas, the 737th TRG is the Air Force’s largest training group, comprised of nine squadrons and more than 900 permanent party personnel. With an average daily load of 7,000 trainees, more than 37,314 Airmen graduated BMT in fiscal year 2017 and BMT instructors are postured to increase that number to more than 40,200 graduates in fiscal year 2019.

U.S. Air Force Col. Gerald Donohue, 19th Airlift Wing commander, signs a pledge form in support of the Combined Federal Campaign at Little Rock Air Force Base on Oct. 24. People are able to donate to a charity through CFC using the traditional pledge-form method, or through a website, such as cfcgiving.opm.gov.

The 57th annual Combined Federal Campaign gives federal employees, postal workers and service members the opportunity to donate to numerous charities across the globe, now through January 2019.

The CFC is a worker-focused program intended to help all federal employees improve the quality of life for their colleagues during difficult times from donations received for organizations that support finding cures for illnesses, humanitarian aid, animal charities and many others.

“There are so many good causes out there,” said U.S. Air Force Senior Master Sgt. Peter Ruegger, 19th Airlift Wing CFC representative. “Even if people don’t want to donate money, they can donate their time by volunteering.”

This year’s theme is “Show Some Love,” and the total donation goal for Team Little Rock is $50,000. Every squadron at Little Rock AFB has a representative who can give more information about the CFC and how to donate. Individuals can donate one of two ways: pledge forms or online.

Anybody can pledge to donate to the CFC, but they only have until Jan. 11, 2019, to do so. To make a donation, contact your squadron’s CFC representative or go to <https://cfcgiving.opm.gov/>.

Airmen compete in Alpha Warrior obstacle challenge

U.S. AIR FORCE PHOTOS BY SENIOR AIRMAN GRACE NICHOLS

Airmen and families are instructed on how to use the Alpha Warrior Battle Rig during a competition at Little Rock Air Force Base on Nov. 2. The program is designed to enhance functional fitness training by incorporating the four pillars of Comprehensive Airmen Fitness – physical, spiritual, mental and social – to help Airmen build and maintain resiliency at home station and while deployed.

Event planners and Airmen gather after an Alpha Warrior competition at Little Rock Air Force Base on Nov. 2. The Alpha Warrior Battle Rig obstacle course was built over a 48-hour period.

AMC CC highlights new priority with Team Little Rock

STORY AND PHOTOS BY AIRMAN 1ST CLASS KRISTINE M. GRUWELL
19TH AIRLIFT WING PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Team Little Rock Airmen had the opportunity to interact with and tell their stories to Gen. Maryanne Miller, commander of Air Mobility Command, during a Nov. 1-2 visit to Little Rock Air Force Base.

The two-day visit began at the base chapel, where Miller met with representatives from various organizations. This included the mental health office, casualty assistance team, sexual assault prevention and response office and chapel team – all of whom are focused on providing coordinated, proactive care for Airmen and their families.

“There is no more important thing we can do as leaders than take care of our Airmen,” Miller said. “The quicker we can get them the help they need, the better they will be in the long run; that is what this team is focused on.”

Miller sat down with spouses and shared her thoughts on the importance of retaining and developing Air Force families. Team Little Rock Airmen then had a chance to explain a localized approach to programs such as Airman Leadership School and the Commander’s Right Start Course, which focus on developing Airmen.

“As we pivot toward focusing on and improving our full-spectrum readiness as an organization, we are taking a look at how we, at the flight level, can have an impact on that,” said Capt. Fiona Pham, 19th Logistics Readiness Squadron materiel management flight commander, referring to how Team Little Rock is specifically looking at developing junior officers with the Flight Leadership Course. “We think it is important to develop families, so we are bringing spouses into the course as well.”

Miller provided insight into the reason leaders should focus on developing Airmen for tomorrow.

“What does the Mobility Airman of the future need to look like?” Miller asked. “Right now, we are developing great Airmen – there’s no question about that. We have to continue to sharpen and develop our skills to be ready for the threats of tomorrow.”

The first day concluded with a hands-on event led by two vehicle maintenance Airmen who assisted Miller in changing a government-owned vehicle’s

Hernandez spoke to the accomplishments of her medical team during the August ROCKI 18-07 exercise, which was the latest step toward improving full-spectrum readiness for the 19th AW.

alternator. While working, Airmen highlighted the partnership between the 19th Airlift Wing and the 189th Airlift Wing, who together have eliminated the requirement for a duplicate vehicle maintenance facility by consolidating to one location, resulting in saved resources and time.

Day two afforded the opportunity to experience Camp Warlord, Team Little Rock's on-base, exercise deployment zone used for readiness training.

There, Miller saw facilities that have been revitalized, by the 19th AW's efforts to improve full-spectrum readiness over the last year.

"Recapitalizing on our training facilities at Camp Warlord has really bolstered our readiness efforts," said U.S. Air Force Col. Gerald Donohue, 19th AW commander. "It has allowed us to train aggressively right here at Little Rock AFB, and then turn around and get our Airmen home to their beds. That has been instrumental to our successes at honing our readiness skills for tomorrow's fight where we will need to be able to project and sustain combat airlift in degraded and contested environments."

Shifting from the training environment to real-world operations, Miller entered a room full of 61st Airlift Squadron Airmen. Representatives addressed efforts toward providing more predictable and effective training for aircrew that enhances full-spectrum readiness at the unit level. Those in attendance discussed the current state of deployments and training.

"We need to take a look at how you've been deploying and see where we can improve the lives of our families and retain airlift Airmen," Miller said. "Maintaining our competitive advantage requires continuous investment in our people and capabilities."

This discussion continued in an all-call with Airmen from base, focusing on achieving mobility objectives in contested environments, but ending on an important note: taking care of each other at all levels.

"We are not all required to do great things, but we're required to do things with great love," Miller said, while sharing personal experiences. "Our job is to make sure that while developing leaders, we are looking out for our Airmen and for their resilience at all levels."

Local hero takes flight with Thunderbirds

By Staff Sgt. Mercedes Taylor
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

One of Central Arkansas's local heroes was honored by the U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds as the Little Rock Air Force Base, Arkansas, "Hometown Hero" on Oct. 26 prior to the Thunder Over the Rock Air and Space Show.

As the Hometown Hero, Officer Tommy Norman, a North Little Rock Police Department officer and public figure, received a flight with the Thunderbirds in an F-16 Fighting Falcon. He was selected because of his activism in the community and reputation as a positive role model.

In 2015, Norman received attention after his social media videos of his interactions with civilians went viral while the actions of police officers had become closely reviewed online.

"About 10 years ago, I started posting videos and pictures of my interactions with people," Norman said. "It gained a lot of attention in a time where not a lot of police officers were trusted; police officers were receiving a bad name across the world. Those videos received a lot of positive attention, so I kept making them."

Norman eventually garnered approximately 2 million followers on Facebook and Instagram, and has been featured on television shows such as Basketball Wives, Dr. Phil and the Today Show. He was even given $10,000 in gift cards from Bruno Mars to make sure people in the community had shoes.

"I didn't intend to have the platform I have now," Norman said. "When I signed up as a police officer, I was just looking to continue to give. I didn't know this was going to be something I would be blessed with. I feel obligated to continue because it makes people feel good about themselves around the world, and it puts people at peace."

Because of his upbringing, Norman knew what his calling in life was at an early age.

"My mom taught all of us to put others first, even if that meant that we had to do without," Norman said. "It was always about giving. It was just a way of life for me. I had a lawn mower and weed eater, and I would go around and mow people's grass for free. It started from there. I would paint houses and deliver meals. I realized there were so many ways to give back. I realized what my purpose was in life, which was to be a giver."

Later, Norman decided to become a police officer because he knew he could make more of an impact as a public servant. Norman decided to take it one step further and created the Mission Give foundation.

"I wanted to form a foundation to begin a legacy, but not limit it to being a police officer," Norman said. "A lot of people know me as Officer Norman, but I want people to know me as Tommy. I want to prove to people you don't have to be a police officer to give back. You can be an everyday, ordinary citizen to give and make a difference."

Throughout his life, Norman has lived by one goal: to give back and make a difference. He strives to do that in his nation during a time where the actions of law enforcement personnel have been closely examined by the public eye.

"I'm really thankful to be selected as the Hometown Hero," Norman said. "I don't feel worthy and I don't feel like I deserved it, but it's a huge honor to be selected. I'm thankful it happened."
